SUNRISE-TO-SUNSET MAIL

WASHINGTON SANCTIONS IT

Special to The New York Times.

Victor Carlstrom, already the holder of many records for long-distance aeroplane flights, began today preparations for a sunrise-to-sunset non-stop flight from Chicago to New York for THE NEW YORK TIMES. Carlstrom will make his trip some day next week. He will fly alone and will carry with him a limited amount of mail which will be posted in Chicago in the morning and delivered to the addressees in New York on the evening of the same day if all goes well. This follows upon the action of the Post Office Department today in availing itself of the opportunity presented by THE TIMES to use the flight as an experimental aeroplane mail route from Chicago to New York.

If Carlstrom succeeds in his attempt he will have established the record for long distance non-stop flight in the United States, and a world's record for long distance flight without a stop across country, for the trip between the two cities by the route which he has chosen will be something more than 900 miles. Moreover, he is making the venture without relying on the following of a line of railroad, a river, or some other easily visible landmark for his guidance, as has been the case in most long-distance air trips heretofore in this country.

Carlstrom will skirt the lower end of Lake Michigan and then cut straight across country to Cleveland. For the latter half of this part of his trip he will have the shore line of Lake Erie to guide him, but the first part, across Indiana, must be made by the compass alone. After Cleveland he will again forsake the line of the lake shore and cut straight across to the neighborhood of Jamestown, N. Y., thence due east a little north of the Pennsylvania line over Elmira and Binghamton. At the latter city he will turn off to the southeast and fly over Port Jervis and Paterson, and then swinging eastward again he will come out over the Hudson in the neighborhood of the Fort Lee Ferry, and will fly along Riverside Drive to the finish point of his route, which will probably be Governors Island. The finish of the flight may thus be witnessed by New Yorkers from Riverside Drive and from roofs all over the city.

Hopes to Make It in Nine Hours.

It is expected that the trip will be made in a little over nine hours at a rate of a hundred miles an hour, and that Carlstrom can leave Chicago at sunrise and reach New York in the late afternoon.

Carlstrom expects no trouble from his abandonment of the obvious course of following one of the direct railroad lines.

"The question of a flight from Chicago to New York without stopping," he said today, "is, of course, chiefly a question of fuel. An immense quantity of gasoline must be carried, and obviously the most direct route, other things being equal, is the best. But by bearing to the north as far as the line from Jamestown to Binghamton I shall avoid most of the mountainous country, which makes the last half of the trip the more difficult part of the problem.

"I expect to fly at an altitude of perhaps 6,000 to 8,000 feet. At this height one, of course, has a view over an immense extent of country. [If the weather is clear Mr. Carlstrom will be able to see from 80 to 110 miles all around him.] Probably I shall not be out of sight of the lakes very long doing the first half of the trip. I expect to make the voyage by map and compass, and shall rely on the drift indicator to keep me from being turned out of my course by the wind. In fact, the wind ought to be of considerable assistance. At a height of 6,000 or 8,000 feet it is possible to count on a westerly wind with more confidence than at lower levels."

Finish at Governors Island.

Glenn H. Curtiss, President of the Curtiss Aeroplane Company, which is arranging the trip for THE TIMES, has asked the War Department for the use of the army aviation field at Chicago as a starting point and for Governors Island as a finish. The army has a certain interest in the flight, for the machine in which Carlstrom is to make the attempt is, with certain modifications, the Curtiss biplane known as Model R, of which sixteen are now in use by the United States Army on the Mexican border and more than a hundred have been sold to the British Government for use on the western front.

The changes in the machine involve a greater capacity for carrying gasoline and a larger wing spread, but it is possible that the latter feature may be modified when Carlstrom begins tomorrow his tests of the aeroplane in which he is to make the flight. The machine was assembled this afternoon at the Curtiss factory here, and will be taken tomorrow morning to the Curtiss aerodrome eight miles north of the city. Here Carlstrom will begin his tests tomorrow afternoon. The preliminary experiments at Buffalo will include one flight of perhaps 500 or 600 miles, according to Mr. Curtiss, and probably will last for three or more days. In the latter part of the week the aeroplane will be shipped to

SHACKLETON WILL HEAD A NEW RELIEF PARTY

SANTIAGO, Chile, Oct. 3.—Sir Ernest Shackleton has abandoned the idea of sailing for England this week from Buenos Aires, and instead will proceed to Australia to command an expedition to rescue ten members of the Shackleton party who were left with scanty provisions on the west side of the South Polar continent.

These men were on land when their ship, the Aurora, was caught in the ice and carried away. They were awaiting the arrival of Lieutenant Shackleton, who disembarked on the east side of the continent, but was compelled to return to his starting point.

Sir Ernest and his companions departed from Santiago last night for Buenos Aires, whence they will proceed to Montevideo to thank the Uruguayan Government for its unavailing effort to rescue the members of the Shackleton party who were stranded on Elephant Island. Sir Ernest's comrades will sail for England from Buenos Aires. He will return to Valparaiso next Sunday. Thence he will go to Panama, San Francisco, and Australia. He expects to reach Australia on Nov. 25.

CURTAIL PRIVILEGES OF SING SING CONVICTS

Long-Term Men Not to be Allowed Outside the Prison Walls.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Oct. 3.—Thomas Mott Osborne, Warden of Sing Sing Prison, and other prison heads in the State who have been granting special privileges to convicts as part of the movement to reform prison life, are directed by an order issued today by James M. Carter, State Superintendent of Prisons, no longer to extend to convicts sentenced to life, or long term imprisonment, privileges which would carry them outside the prison walls. It was explained at the Prison Department that the order had been prompted by the escape of two inmates from Sing Sing yesterday, the latest of several recent escapes, and that it was directed at Sing Sing Prison, although its terms had been made general, and no exceptions would be permitted in any prison.

Soon after signing the order Mr. Carter received word that W. H. Conniber had escaped from Great Meadow Prison, where he had served fourteen years of a seventeen-year term for murder. Mr. Carter's order reads:

> While it is not the intention of the Superintendent to interfere with the experiment which you are testing at your institution, in view of my recent order as regards escapes, I have decided that hereafter the privileges of convicts known as "lifers" and those having long terms to serve must be confined inside of the walls of the institution, this order to take effect at once.

Mr. Carter has instructed his chief clerk to investigate recent escapes from Sing Sing and from the Matteawan Hospital for the Criminal Insane.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, N. Y., Oct. 3.—More than 1,500 convicts proclaimed their loyalty to Warden Osborne and to the Mutual Welfare League at a chapel meeting tonight. The recent escapes were commented on by convict speakers, who asserted that the men who stayed behind were far happier than those who had betrayed the Warden's trust.

Warden Osborne was cheered for ten minutes when he said he had not lost faith in the men, and promised to keep on in the reform work he had started.

CARS' CRASH CAUSES BRIDGE TO COLLAPSE

Two Killed in Cleveland When Trolleys Plunge Through Structure After Accident.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 3.—Two persons were killed and more than thirty are in hospitals as the result of a collision early this evening between two street cars on the West Third Street Bridge, causing the structure to collapse and precipitate the cars thirty feet to the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks below, where they almost rolled into the Cuyahoga River. The dead are Mrs. Clara Dille, a passenger, and Otto Borshert, motorman.

The accident occurred when a southbound Scranton road car, carrying a crowd of women shoppers home at the rush hour, broke away from the motorman on an incline approaching the bridge and tore down upon the north approach to the structure just as a northbound car reached the same point. The runaway car jumped the track and struck the northbound car. The combined weight of the two cars and the shock of the collision was too much for the wooden bridge, which sagged and then gave way.

Edna Waddington, a telephone operator, employed by the Erie Railroad Company, saw the accident from where she sat at her switchboard and turned in a call for ambulances, doctors, and the Fire Department. The work of rescue began at once. Those who had not been seriously injured extricated themselves and then gave aid to those less fortunate.

The portion of the bridge which fell is just north of the river. It is twenty-five years old. The main part of the structure was washed away in the 1912 flood and was replaced the same year by another wooden bridge bought in Detroit and brought here. Mayor Davis and Public Utilities Director Farrell rushed to the scene and promised to conduct an inquiry in an effort to place the responsibility for the disaster.

Motorman H. T. Daniel of the southbound runaway car escaped serious injury, but his conductor is among the dead. The southbound car was demolished by the force of the crash. The northbound car was badly damaged.

The dead whose bodies have been recovered include Otto Dorchert, conductor of the southbound car; D. O'Keefe, motorman of the northbound car, and two unidentified women.

A delivery wagon and horse, manned by a driver, which was on the collapsed portion of the bridge, also went down with the structure. The fate of the driver could not be learned.

MILK IS NEARER FAMINE STAGE

SMALL DEALERS CUT OFF

FARMERS SEE LONG FIGHT

Shortage is Now Felt Keenly in Suburbs—All Hospitals Are Supplied.

Both the State and City Governments took a hand yesterday in trying to bring about some settlement that would prevent New York City's rapidly decreasing milk supply from reaching the famine stage, but at the end of the day it was admitted that the situation appeared more hopeless than at any time since New York and New Jersey farmers decided to boycott New York City milk distributers because of their refusal to pay 1 cent more a quart.

Meantime, New York City had to get along on less than half of its normal milk supply. Despite the assertions of the three biggest distributing companies that they had distributed about 60 per cent. of their normal output of milk during the day, Health Department inspectors on the railroad platforms reported that only 40 to 50 per cent. of the normal supply reached the city. State Commissioner of Foods and Markets J. J. Dillon, who is under fire by the distributers for representing the farmers in their fight, estimated that only 25 per cent. of the normal supply actually arrived, part of this coming from distant States. The remainder, he said, came from supplies that had been held over for the emergency by the distributers and that probably would soon be exhausted.

Fruitless Conference with Mayor.

Among the official conferences of the day was one held by Mayor Mitchel at the City Hall. It was attended by Health Commissioner Emerson, District Attorney Swann, and officials of the large distributing companies. After its conclusion it was announced that another conference would be held today, but the Mayor said he knew of no action he could take.

The distributers sent a letter to Governor Whitman by Edward Lazansky, counsel for a number of the distributers, laying the blame for the milk embargo on Commissioner Dillon and urging the Governor to take "appropriate steps" in the matter.

Among the day's developments among the farmers themselves were the tightening of picket lines in the vicinity of rural milk stations to keep milk from all sources from reaching the plants of the big city distributers, the dumping out on country roads of more milk being delivered to the stations, and the signing up of hundreds of new members of the Dairymen's League. The league, its officers said, is rapidly organizing branches in other States as far West as Ohio.

Normally the city derives its milk from New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, and Pennsylvania. The Dairymen's League is not organized in Pennsylvania, and milk from that State coming into the city was increased 50 per cent. in quantity yesterday, but it was said that there was no hope of procuring enough to prevent the shortage from becoming acute, and that the prospect of a near famine by the end of the week was practically as serious as it appeared on Monday. The three big distributers, however, insisted that from new sources they were constantly increasing their supply. The small dealers admitted that the tightening grip of the Dairymen's League was affecting them more seriously hourly. Many of them were practically without milk.

Labor Forum Aids Farmers.

The farmers found a new ally during the day in the New York Labor Forum. The New York Citizens' Committee, too, joined the Board of Management of the Labor Forum in addressing an open letter to the dairy farmers encouraging them in their fight.

"We are here witnessing," the letter stated, "one of the most flagrant denials of the right of men to organize and to have their organization dealt with, as in the case of the traction strike in New York City. Despite the difference of circumstance, their problem is your problem; your method is their method; their right to organize is your right to organize."

In other quarters, too, the farmers found friends. Governor Whitman said he thought their demand for higher prices was justified, and sympathy for their aims was expressed at a meeting of the National Housewives' League, held to discuss the milk problem, though no active means of helping were decided upon.

Commissioner Dillon held several conferences with up-State and New Jersey farmers, and afterward said:

"This is the last effort of the farmers to place their milk-producing business on a paying basis. Many have been producing milk at a loss. Many have gone out of the business. If they lose this fight, a majority of them will abandon this end of their business."

He reiterated his statement that he would welcome any investigation that might be made by the State Attorney General. At the local office of the State Attorney General it was said that the Deputy Commissioner appointed to make an investigation, Merton E. Lewis, had not arrived, and that the office here had had no instructions. Each faction

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 3.—Never were such numbers of aeroplanes employed and never did they play such an important part as in the battle of the Somme.

The wastage of British aeroplanes at the front has been supplied by new machines flown across the Channel from England, where, after coming from the factory, they are tested out at a home aerodrome. The record time in crossing the Channel at the narrowest point, where the distance is twenty-two miles, is eight minutes.

When The Associated Press correspondent, who was in London for a day's leave from the front, asked a certain General at the War Office for permission to fly back, the answer was: "Perfectly easy."

"What about my baggage?" asked the correspondent.

"Oh, take it along and strap it on," replied the General. "An aeroplane that carries 150 pounds of bombs will not be bothered with a dress suit case."

A dozen machines, one after another, were due to go to France that day as soon as the wire said a storm on the other side of the Channel had passed. The correspondent slipped into a wadded jacket for protection against the wind, which would also act as a lifebuoy if he happened to fall into the Channel, and took his place, a position usually occupied by the observer, who also mans the machine gun.

MT. VERNON KILLS THE CARMEN'S LAW

Council Votes 8 to 1 Repealing 15-Day Ordinance Which the Union Fathered.

WOMEN PLAN PARADE HERE

By amending an ordinance requiring motormen and conductors to have fifteen days' experience in that city before attempting to run street cars, Mount Vernon yesterday administered to the carmen's union one of the severest setbacks it has had since it was checked in its efforts to organize the service employes of the traction companies in Manhattan. tan.

The amendment, passed by the Common Council by a vote of 8 to 1, is effective tomorrow morning. It eliminates the provision that prospective employes must obtain their experience in Mount Vernon, and thus opens the way for importing strike breakers. It is the first time in three years that any city in the southern half of Westchester County, the stronghold of the carmen's association in New York, has attempted to repeal such a regulation.

In 1913, when the carmen started to extend their organization in the State, Yonkers, Mount Vernon and New Rochelle were the first to assist them by adopting fifteen-day efficiency ordinances fathered by the union. It was largely because of these ordinances that the union was able to win its many strikes in Yonkers, and which encouraged it to make repeated attempts to have a similar measure adopted by the State Legislature. Yonkers and New Rochelle are still bound by the enactment.

Cars manned by strike breakers are to be operated tomorrow. Mayor Fiske of Mount Vernon is determined to restore service and to suppress disorders, even if he has to ask for the militia. Five cars were in service in Mount Vernon yesterday, but there was little disorder. No cars were run in Yonkers and New Rochelle, and it is doubtful if any will be until those towns also repeal the fifteen-day ordinances.

Wives and daughters of striking street car men in New York City are to take part in a sympathy campaign which has succeeded the general strike in the plan arranged by the labor leaders. According to an announcement made last night by the car men's union, women will parade next week and a demonstration in Union Square will follow.

The parade is part of a program mapped out by the labor leaders in an endeavor to change the public's attitude toward the strike. The women will meet in Mozart Hall, 328 East Eighty-sixth Street, on Thursday, to arrange the details of the parade.

Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, conferred with William B. Fitzgerald, organizer for the strikers, at the Hotel Continental yesterday. He refused to say what had been discussed, but said, referring to Mr. Fitzgerald, "The street car strike is in good hands."

"Mother" Jones, prominent as an agitator in coal strikes, arrived here last night to take part in the car strike. Her address and the nature of her purposed activities were kept secret.

Police Commissioner Woods, in a statement last night, warned automobile drivers of a renewal of the campaign against speeders which was interrupted by the enforced absence of traffic men on strike duty. "This is necessary because of the congestion of traffic and recklessness which has followed the appearance of these jitneys," he said.

UP-STATE STRIKE SPREADS.

Cities and Villages in Albany District Are Without Car Service.

ALBANY, Oct. 3.—Nearly 250,000 persons in six cities and a score of villages in the capital district were without local traction facilities today. The strike of the unionized employes of the United Traction Company, which began yesterday in Albany and Rensselaer, spread today to Troy, Cohoes, Watervliet, and Green Island. Not a trolley wheel turned in any of the cities. There was no disorder.

The United States arsenal at Watervliet, which is rushed with work at this time, was one of the most seriously affected places of business in the district. Efforts of local officials to bring about a settlement continued with no results.

PREMIER OKUMA RESIGNS.

TOKIO, Wednesday, Oct. 4.—Count Okuma, the Prime Minister of Japan, resigned today, owing to his advanced age.

Before he resigned the Premier, it is said, asserted that he would recommend to the Emperor the appointment of Viscount Takaaki Kato as his successor.

The Okuma Cabinet was formed in August of last year. Its resignation had been expected for several months. It was forecast by the Premier in a speech last May in which he indicated that he would retire in favor of Viscount Kato.

Viscount Kato has served as Foreign Minister and Ambassador to Great Britain. He took a prominent part in the negotiations which followed the presentation of the twenty-one Japanese demands on China and also in the discussion with Washington of the California anti-alien land law.

PRESIDENT LEAVES ON TRIP TO OMAHA

BERNSTORFF COMES MONDAY

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Oct. 3.—President Wilson left here at 8:30 tonight for Omaha, where he will speak on Thursday at the celebration of the admission of Nebraska to the Union. With him on the trip are Mrs. Wilson, Secretary Tumulty and Dr. Grayson. The President will review a pageant on Thursday afternoon, and will speak twice, once at a luncheon at noon, and again at a big public meeting in the evening. He will make no long stops on the way.

His advisers here predict an unusual trip. They say the President is just warming up to the campaign, which reached its high level so far in the speech at Shadow Lawn last Saturday. He will be restricted in the West by his determination to avoid open partisanship, but that will not deter him, Democratic leaders say, from giving to his hearers a thorough explanation of his position on public questions.

A delegation from the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League came to Shadow Lawn this afternoon to present their views on federal moving picture censorship, and to learn the President's position on the question. Among them were William A. Brady, Carl Lammle, President of the Universal Film Company, and Walter Irwin, who acted as spokesman. Their visit was prompted partly by the Hughes Federal Censorship bill introduced in the last session of Congress.

They left believing that the President sympathized with their position. A statement was issued by them which read in part:

"The attitude and utterances of President Wilson plainly indicated that to his way of thinking the presumption was against the principle of censorship, and that an overwhelmingly strong case would have to be made out in favor of censorship before his support could be enlisted for it. The motion picture delegation felt from the President's manner and his informal observations on the subject that in the future legislative action in relation to moving pictures, he would extend a guiding hand—a hand of entire justice to the industry."

The picture men took advantage of their visit to Shadow Lawn to have a series of films of the President taken. These will be sent all over the country. Among the pictures taken was one entitled, "Joining the President in a Screen Smile," and one of "Mr. Wilson's Big Moment"—a close-up view.

Ambassador von Bernstorff will come to Shadow Lawn Monday for an important conference over the question of relief for Poland. The President is vitally interested in the problem which he made the subject of a personal message to the rulers of warring countries last Summer. He is expected to urge Count von Bernstorff to use all his influence with the German Emperor to bring about a more satisfactory arrangement for the philanthropists here who are trying to get aid to the Polish war sufferers.

It was announced today that William F. McCombs, New York Senatorial nominee, would take luncheon with the President next Tuesday. His visit will be followed within a few days by one from E. S. Harris, Democratic State Chairman. Judge Seabury saw the President a few days ago. All the conferences are directed toward the object of securing the proper co-operation for the State and National tickets in New York.

Senator Hughes of New Jersey saw the President this morning and discussed the general political situation. Upon leaving he issued a statement regarding the eight-hour issue, in which he said:

"One of the most persistent opponents of the enforcement of eight-hour legislation was Candidate Hughes's chief spokesman, former President Roosevelt. When he was President I had occasion to take up with him the enforcement of that law with reference to the construction of public works for the District of Columbia. However, it happened to be shortly after the election and I was unable to get any action. Times have changed since then, however, and I, as well as every friend of the eight-hour movement, rejoice in the fact that Mr. Hughes has joined hands with President Wilson in the belief that society at large approves of the eight-hour day. Mr. Hughes's present stand, of course, means the disappearance of the eight-hour day controversy as an issue in the present campaign."

WOODROW WILSON DAY OCT. 28

President Will Send a Message on "The New Freedom" to Country.

For Woodrow Wilson Day at Shadow Lawn, N. J., Saturday, Oct. 28, has been set aside. On that day President Wilson will send a message to Democrats throughout the country which will be in the nature of a proclamation of "The New Freedom." Every Democratic State and County Committee is co-operating with the National Committee in making the ceremony a Wilson Day. The National Committee desires that there shall be a display of flags and bunting, and it is possible that delegations will go to Shadow Lawn to meet the President.

'THEODORE' GRASPS THE HAND OF 'WILL'

But Roosevelt-Taft Greeting at Union League Is Only That and Nothing More.

COLONEL ASSAILS PRESIDENT

POTPOURRI OF POLITICIANS

In any event, Taft and T. R. shook hands.

The much discussed, long heralded get-together meeting, which was to make the Republican Party great and reunited, took place last night in the carefully censored library and dining hall of the Union League Club. And in all the happenings which involved the heterogeneous mass of political figures—Old Guard, Progressives, progressive Republicans, and others who were not quite sure how they ought to be classified—the one most discussed, the one awaited with the deepest interest was the moment when the chief haters of 1912, Theodore Roosevelt and ex-President William Howard Taft, clasped hands.

The event came at a moment when newspaper reporters were led into a side room, where their eyes could not see and ears were useless to hear what might be said. Immediately afterward there were a dozen versions of what had taken place. There was the Whitman version and the Sheldon version, the Taft version, and the Roosevelt version. Edward E. O'Brien, a member of the Reception Committee, burst into the room where the reporters had been sent and said:

"They shook hands and there was the greatest cordiality. Yes, certainly! The greatest cordiality. I never saw such a smile on Colonel Roosevelt's face, and also upon that of Mr. Taft. Don't forget that; it was most cordial."

But of all the versions this was the only one which had anything to say about cordiality. The so-called Taft version, as relayed to the reporters by a friend who dropped into the room, was that "we shook hands as any gentlemen might do and there was not a word said."

Here's the True Story.

As a large proposition this version was pretty much the same as the others. The true story is this:

There was no reconciliation. Colonel Roosevelt, after shaking hands with eight or ten others who were in a group in the alcove of the library where the reception was held, found himself confronting Mr. Taft. Mr. Taft extended his hand and the Colonel shook it. There was uttered by each some passing triviality—a "how do you do"—and there the conversation ended. As far as could be learned neither mentioned the other by name, and the conversation, if such it might be called, was not taken up again during the evening. Colonel Roosevelt went on shaking hands with a thousand other men, greeting old friends who may have differed with him politically in the past four years with hearty words and broad smiles.

He shook hands with Senator Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania, who, by the way, extended his hand first also. He recalled here and there a happy incident of past relations, and laughed and joked about it. The briefest greeting of all was that with Mr. Taft.

On one other occasion Colonel Roosevelt and ex-President Taft shook hands since the rupture which brought them to the bitter fight for the nomination in 1912. That was at the funeral of Professor Lounsbury at New Haven on April 13, 1915. Colonel Roosevelt and Mr. Taft were pallbearers. They shook hands and Mr. Taft addressed the Colonel by his first name. Colonel Roosevelt asked after the health of Mr. Taft. The conversation ended there.

Colonel Roosevelt and Mr. Taft attended the funeral of Whitelaw Reid in this city on Jan. 4, 1913. They did not shake hands upon that occasion.

William Barnes, another of the haters of 1912, who may have recalled also the drubbing the Colonel gave him at Syracuse when he sued for libel, was late in arriving, reaching the club about 9:45 o'clock. Colonel Roosevelt, it was understood, was ready to shake hands with Barnes if Barnes extended his hand first, but when Barnes got there Colonel Roosevelt was about to deliver an address. The music which reached the ears of Barnes was a great outburst of applause—easily the most spontaneous and enthusiastic of the evening. When he looked up he found before him the smiling face of Colonel Roosevelt, ready with clenched fists to follow up an address by Mr. Hughes with one of his characteristically vigorous appeals to the true spirit of patriotism.

Depew Acts as Buffer.

Except for the brief moment when hands were clasped, Roosevelt and Taft were separated always by at least one person. In the receiving line it was Chauncey M. Depew. At the supper which followed the speaking they were seated at different tables—Colonel Roosevelt at a table labeled No. 2, Mr. Taft at table No. 3. Colonel Roosevelt also was two nearer the head of the receiving line at the reception.

Mr. Taft arrived at the club first, at any rate. There was a big crowd in front as he drove up shortly after 8 o'clock with State Chairman Frederick C. Tanner and Elihu Root, President of the club, and George T. Wilson, and the ex-President was cheered.

Then came William M. Calder, nominee for Senator; W. Murray Crane, Charles D. Hilles, John W. Weeks, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt with Regis H. Post and George W. Perkins; Charles E. Hughes with National Chairman Willcox.

Mr. Hughes arrived just as Colonel Roosevelt was plowing his way through the mass of men in the lower lobby of the club in a fight for a pathway to the elevator to take him to the reception room on the second floor. The crowd

VENIZELISTS MAY JOIN NEW GREEK CABINET

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATHENS, Oct. 3, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—As a result of a Cabinet meeting last night all the members of the Cabinet with the exception of Premier Kalogeropoulos and Foreign Minister Carapanos handed their resignations to the King this morning. His acceptance has not yet been announced, but it is expected today, after which, it is believed, M. Kalogeropoulos will reconstruct the Ministry on national lines.

The national defense movement is beginning to spread to the mainland. Kozani is the latest place to declare for M. Venizelos. Officers of all ranks in the army and navy continue to secede, a large number having gone yesterday to Saloniki. Others have been prevented from going, and put into prison.

Another national difficulty is assuming an alarming character, namely, that of finance. The Government finds it impossible to meet the ordinary administrative demands. The expenditure for the month of September was $4,000,000, to meet which the Treasury only possesses less than $100,000. Recent events have greatly reduced the revenue.

ATHENS, Oct. 3.—The new cabinet will be arranged probably so that several supporters of M. Venizelos, the former Premier, will hold portfolios, thus giving the ministry a national character.

Orders have been issued to the Royalist newspapers to cease attacking M. Venizelos in view of the co-operation of his adherents with the new government.

CANEA, Crete, Oct. 2 (via London, Oct. 3.)—Former Premier Venizelos is expected to leave here shortly for Mytilence, where he will establish the seat of the provisional government. Vice-Admiral Coundouriotis will go to Saloniki to represent the provisional government there.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—A new political party, favoring intervention in the war on the side of the Allies, is being formed in Greece by Demetrios Gounaris, former Premier, according to an Athens dispatch to the Havas Agency. The dispatch says that the movement is meeting with a favorable reception.

Dispatches from Peloponnesus report widespread demonstrations there against the anti-Venizelos movement.

FOUND 400 GERMANS HIDDEN IN TUNNEL

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY ON THE SOMME FRONT, Oct. 3, (via Chantilly, France.)—How the village of Chilly was taken from the Germans in one brilliant dash by French regiments was related today by participants in the action to the correspondent of The Associated Press when he visited that position, which is one of the most important on the allied line.

The artillery preparation was unrelenting, the shower of projectiles of all calibres lasting for two days. Then the French, who had assembled in the most advanced dugouts, dashed out. The first wave reached and cleared the German front. The wave of French then partly crept, partly ran in short bursts to the second German line, and the second wave of French troops advanced in support.

Meanwhile, from somewhere underground, a large body of Germans came between with machine guns and grenades. The French hesitated an instant, but were not stayed. They bayoneted some of the Germans, the rest of whom disappeared into a tunnel. Calls to surrender availed nothing, and it was an impossible task to follow. Then the French built a sandbag redoubt around the tunnel and waited.

The first French wave went on and took the second and third German lines within Chilly itself. There, from the other end, the tunnel began to disgorge troops, whose exit was brought to an end by a French detachment.

Germans in an unknown number were still in the tunnel in the rear and obstinately refused to surrender. Eighteen hours they held out until a captured wounded German was sent in to inform them that the French would shell them out. Thereupon they were sorted in groups until more than 400 men and ten officers were captured.

The Associated Press correspondent today went through the tunnel, which is nearly 1,000 yards in length, with an eighteen-inch railroad track running from beginning to end. Within, at a depth of twelve yards, were sleeping quarters, munition depots, an infirmary, with the most modern surgical instruments, fresh water wells, tons of equipment, electric lights and ventilation pipes. The sides and roof were boarded up and it was possible to walk nearly upright, although at some places it was necessary to crouch, and many parts were inundated.

The entrance to the tunnel was toward Maucourt, the exit in the centre of Chilly, where was found the German commandant's apartment of several rooms, with painted walls, solid doors, chairs, tables, beds, and telephone system. At a depth of forty feet was an excavation sufficiently large to hold a whole company of soldiers, with hoists for machines.

CZAR MYSTIFIES BERLIN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 3.—The appointment of M. Protopopoff, the Second Vice President of the Duma, as Minister of the Interior, was a great surprise to German political observers, who regard it as the most puzzling of recent Russian Ministerial changes.

Well-informed people in Berlin believe that Premier Stuermer's opinion was not asked when this appointment was decided upon, but that it had its origin among the intriguers surrounding the Czarina at Tsarskoe-Selo.

The Tageblatt recalls the fact that Protopopoff is the fifth Russian Minister of the Interior within barely ten months. "It would be altogether wrong to think that his appointment is due to his being a member of the Duma," says the Tageblatt. Stuermer's is and remains a reactionary bureaucratic Cabinet, which will not be swayed by any one member of different sympathies. Protopopoff was comparatively unknown in Germany until with another member of the Duma he made a trip through the Entente countries. It was said on his return he expressed himself not very favorably impressed with what he saw in France, but still less so with what he saw in England. On his way home he is said to have met certain German personalities in Stockholm with whom he seems to have had long conversations, as a result of which he made it quite clear in Petrograd that Germany could not possibly be starved out. Then, to the great astonishment of Petrograd society, he was commanded to appear before the Czar at Grand Headquarters—an honor which had never before been accorded to a mere member of the Duma.

MACKENSEN QUITS DOBRUDJA FORTS, ROME REPORT SAYS

PONTOON BRIDGES WRECKED

TEUTONS RETIRE IN NORTH

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 4.—The Rumanians on both north and south fronts are making important advances. While Berlin admitted officially yesterday that Austro-German troops in Transylvania in the region north of Fogaras had withdrawn before superior Rumanian forces, it was announced in a news dispatch that the flanking of Field Marshal von Mackensen's Bulgar-Turk-German army by the Rumanian force thrown across the Danube into Bulgaria had caused him to order the evacuation of the fortresses of Tutrakan and Silistria, in Dobrudja, recently captured by him. This information came to the Wireless Press from Rome.

The Berlin War Office announces that Austrian and German monitors have destroyed pontoon bridges across the Danube in rear of the invading Rumanians, thus cutting its communications and its way of retreat in the event of this becoming necessary. The official statement reads:

> Front of Field Marshal von Mackensen: In the rear of the Rumanian troops, who crossed the Danube south of Bucharest, Austro-Hungarian monitors destroyed the pontoon bridges which had been thrown across the stream.
> Repeated enemy attacks made yesterday over a wide front from the general line of Topral Sari-Tusla (Dobrudja) again failed against the resistance offered by the brave Bulgarian and Turkish troops. Over 100 prisoners were taken.

> On the southern front in Dobrudja our attacks continue violently over the whole front. The enemy is offering very stubborn resistance.

The text of the portion of the Rumanian official report dealing with the operations in Transylvania reads:

> On the northern and western fronts fighting continues. In the Ghurgill and Hargitta mountains we made prisoner 33 officers and 300 men, besides capturing some wagons and war material. In their retreat toward Saneni Friday our troops took 300 prisoners and five machine guns in the Altui (Olt) valley. Our troops are now counterattacking the enemy in the mountainous region on the right bank of the River Altui.
>
> In the Jisil valley the enemy is making isolated attacks. A violent attack is proceeding in the region of Mount Oboroca, near Petroseny, and the enemy is using asphyxiating gases. We repulsed an enemy attack at Orsova.

> Transylvania theatre: In the region of Bekokten and Baraniiat, north of Fogaras, advancing German and Austro-Hungarian troops came into contact with superior Rumanian forces before whose attack we withdrew. On the frontier west of Rothenthurm Pass the Rumanians attempted to break through our chain of posts. Minor fights are proceeding. In the Hatzeg Mountain enemy attacks were repulsed.

SOFIA, Oct. 2, (via London, Oct. 3.)—The number of Rumanians who have invaded Bulgaria is placed at several battalions by the Bulgarian War Office. A statement announcing the passage of the Danube by the invaders says:

> On the Danube, near Lianoo, between Rustchuk and Turtukai, the enemy conveyed to our banks in boats several battalions. Measures have been taken to attack this force.
> In the Dobrudja two Russian divisions attempted twice to advance on the Bechaoul-Amzatzia-Topral Sari line, but they were compelled to retreat under the fire of our artillery and infantry.
>
> There was quiet on the Black Sea Coast.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Oct. 3, (Dispatch to the London Daily Chronicle.)—A private telegram from Petrograd reports that a great battle is taking place in the Dobrudja, Von Mackensen's army being attacked from the north, the west and from the southwest, and by the Russian fleet from the east.

The Germans, it appears, would have begun a general retreat toward the line of Rustchuk-Varna, save for the critical condition of the country, which has been transformed into an immense swamp owing to recent rains.

SARRAIL'S GREAT ARMY GETTING READY TO MOVE

London Sees Bulgaria in Critical Position Between Upper and Nether Millstones.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 4.—The surprise sprung upon Bulgaria and her Teutonic allies by the Rumanian crossing of the Danube between Rustchuk and Tutrakan is hailed here as a stroke of such daring character that it would not have been attempted except in strong force. It is regarded as a distinct threat to Mackensen's communications through the difficult Dobrudja swamps, where there are no railroads and few roads, and if, as is believed here, the Rumanian invasion of Bulgaria is in strength and if it is pushed successfully, the famous German "thruster" will be forced to make an extremely difficult retirement or sacrifice the bulk of his army.

Mackensen's advance in Dobrudja, which the Kaiser hailed as a decisive victory, already is described by some experts here as a Pyrrhic triumph. He failed to gain the railway bridge that spans the Danube at Cernavoda before the relatively slow concentration of the Russian forces for the assistance of the Rumanians in this district was completed, and when it was completed Mackensen was driven ten miles south.

No doubt is expressed here that preparations have been going on for an offensive move against Mackensen by the Russian and Rumanian force which has held the Danube bridgehead during the recent period of apparent stagnation. It takes time to assemble an army which depends for its transport on a bridge carrying a single line of railroad. Equally no doubt is entertained that the Rumanian crossing of the Danube between Rustchuk and Tutrakan was timed to coincide with an offensive movement by the Russians on the Dobrudja front.

Marcel Hutin says the operations which General Basile Zetton, the new chief of the Rumanian General Headquarters Staff, has now begun have been elaborated in perfect agreement with the Headquarters Staff of the Allies.

Athens reports suggest that once the danger of a stab in the back is removed General Sarrail will be free to move. The so-called mystery of Sarrail's long inactivity has been a prolific source of rumors which have found some space in the American papers. Sarrail's position is lucidly explained in a Saloniki dispatch to The Manchester Guardian.

The army under his supreme command is in composition the most extraordinary army ever united under a single General. The only precedent is the international expedition to China under command of Field Marshal von Waldersee, but the difference between that force and the one under Sarrail is that the former had absolutely no homogeneity. Every section regarded the others with distrust to such an extent that the Field Marshal never gave an order without first assuring himself privately that it met with the approval of the commanders of the various units, whereas the Army of the East has blind confidence in its commander and obeys his slightest order with prompt enthusiasm.

In the complicated problem that faced Sarrail the first of the difficulties he had to confront was the international character of his force, which consists of British, French, Italians, Russians, Serbians, and Albanians. Such a force must be distributed in sections, each holding a certain part of the line. They cannot be mixed without reviving Babel and the confusion of tongues. The disembarking of an army of hundreds of thousands of men hundreds of miles from their base was a long and difficult matter. It meant an accumulation of hundreds of thousands of tons of food, munitions, and war stores of every kind. No advance was possible until the base had been prepared for all emergencies. The fighting line had to be rearranged with the arrival of each contingent, so that the latter would be placed with its proper unit.

Sarrail was also confronted with problems of a political character. He was justified in regarding the Greek Army with the gravest distrust. The military operations had to be subordinated to the political situation and await its settlement.

Meanwhile hundreds of miles of new roads have been built in Macedonia, a country almost without roads, where it would have been impossible to manoeuvre an immense army and keep it supplied with food and munitions with the previously existing means of communication. All the country between Saloniki and the fighting line is dotted with camps and supply depots of every kind. Light railways have been constructed and everything done to assure smooth working of the immense machine. When Sarrail gives the word it will move forward with irresistible force.

Bulgaria, with the Rumanians across the Danube south of Bucharest and the Russian Army advancing in Dobrudja, is declared to be between the upper and nether millstones.

The War Situation

The further we delve into the strategy of the fighting in Dobrudja the greater the problems with which we are faced. The objects of the strategy of both forces are perfectly clear. The Bulgarians will have accomplished their main purpose when the great bridge at Cernavoda is taken or destroyed. This is all that the Bulgarian operations mean and is the only thing they can do in Dobrudja which would have any serious effect on the situation. The Rumanian-Russian object is to drive through Bulgaria and relieve the situation on the Saloniki front by a serious attempt to take Constantinople.

This is the meat of the whole thing. The means by which each of the belligerent parties are seeking to effect its purpose is the interesting point, and the point which insists on hiding itself beyond a cloud. We have seen the general situation in Dobrudja, the stretching of the Bulgarian line south of the Constanza-Bucharest Railroad from the Black Sea to the Danube, and the great efforts of the Rumanians to beat one of the flanks back and thereby force the centre to retire. Yesterday we saw this attempt take the form of a crossing of the river between Rustchuk and Tutrakan. We have not yet seen the effect of this crossing on the front before the railroad.

This column yesterday pointed out the menace to Mackensen's forces of this effort to turn his flank and strike behind him. The danger cannot be minimized. It is real and it is vital. At the same time the element of danger does not exist for Mackensen alone. There is danger also to the Rumanian force which made the crossing.

Let us first see the position of this force in its true light. It is situated between Rustchuk and Tutrakan, both of which are held by the Bulgarians, though neither is probably held in great strength. The crossing force will immediately construct a bridgehead on the southern bank of the river and strongly fortify this position. This is the base from which it must work. Its line of communications and supply will be the pontoon bridge in its rear, which it must guard and put into a state of perfect defense before it can advance. The Bulgarian answer will probably be a concentration of forces to oppose it, and if possible drive it across the river again. These forces will probably base on Rustchuk. At the same time a force will probably move westward from Tutrakan to strike from the other flank. Rumania cannot afford to simply hold her positions here. She must break through whatever forces are sent to oppose her and then strike against the flank and rear of the main line. Then we will see the retreat. A wireless report received yesterday stated that the evacuation of Silistria and Tutrakan had already been made, but nothing official has yet been said regarding it.

The danger to the Rumanian force lies first in its size, or rather its lack of size. To act on the offensive, in fact to defend itself without making any attempt to advance, this force will have to be of considerable size. On this point we are, as I have said, ignorant. It is fighting in a dangerous position with its back against the river, although it is pretty well guarded we may be sure, by guns from the other side. Its only line of retreat is the thin, unstable line of a pontoon bridge, a line that is fragile and easily destroyed by artillery fire. In case of an enforced retreat, this line will become so congested as to turn defeat into disaster if the opposing artillery can reach it. It is subject to attack from three sides, the west from Rustchuk, the east from Tutrakan, the south the open country of northern Bulgaria. The Teutons, in fact, already report having destroyed the pontoon by means of monitors in the Danube.

This is not likely to prove a very serious affair. It will be recalled that the Rumanians captured Orsova a short time ago, and the fall of Orsova meant the control of the Danube from that point to the sea. All Austrian traffic, whether for direct offensive work or for the transport of troops, was done away with. The Russians, controlling the mouth of the Danube, undoubtedly sent some gunboats from their Black Sea fleet down the river to offset the work of the Austrian monitors, so while it is possible that a stray shell may have struck this bridge, it is not likely that it can be kept out of commission for any length of time. Also we may be sure that in spite of such victories as the Teutonic allies have won so far, and they have been by no means overwhelming, the Rumanian leaders are not asleep and know just what they have to protect and what the problems involved are. Not one bridge but several have been thrown across the river, and the fact that they were constructed at all shows that the Rumanian numbers involved in this operation were geratly superior to those of their enemies.

The extreme probabilities are, therefore, that the Bulgarian report of the number of men who have crossed—a few battalions—is an underestimate. It is not too much to expect that, inasmuch as the advantage of position all lies with the Rumanians, the fighting will soon take on another phase and descend from the plains of Dobrudja to the foothills of the Bulgarian mountains, and that the Teutons' efforts will be to protect the railroad which runs inside of the Bulgarian border rather than to attack the road which runs through Eastern Rumania.

BULGARS IN RETREAT ON SALONIKI FRONT

LONDON, Wednesday, Oct. 4.—Following the victories gained by the Serbians on the crest and western slopes of the Kaimakcalan heights, commanding part of the valley leading to Monastir, the Bulgarians have abandoned their line along the Brod River and in the region of the Starkovgrob and are retreating northward.

An official statement on the operations issued by the French War Office last night says:

> As a result of the victorious actions fought by the Serbians in the region of Kaimakcalan, the Bulgarians have abandoned their positions on Starkovgrob and the River Brod and appear to retreating toward the north.
> The Serbians have occupied Hovio and the French Petorak and Verbeni. On the right wing the British have captured Janikov, east of the Struma.

An earlier communication from French Army Headquarters read as follows:

> On the left bank of the Struma two fresh Bulgarian counterattacks against the positions captured by the British on Sept. 30 were repulsed with sanguinary losses for the enemy.
>
> In the region of the Cerna the Serbians continued to advance on the western slopes and the main crest of Kaimakcalan. Serbian infantry yesterday carried first line enemy trenches.
>

Following is the British War Office statement:

> Yesterday the Bulgarians counterattacked with three battalions against our new positions on the east bank of the Struma. The attack was broken by our fire. One of our battalions then charged with the bayonet and completely routed the enemy, taking forty prisoners.
>
> The Royal Flying Corps carried out successful bombing attacks on troops in transport in Prosenik and on a railroad train traveling from there to Seres.

That they have retreated from Kaimakcalan is finally admitted in this official communication from the Sofia War Office:

> Macedonian Front—In the Lake Presba region there was considerable artillery activity without infantry action at Hill 1,944, south of Kaimakcalan. As a consequence of violent artillery fire on the summit and in order to avoid unnecessary loss our troops were ordered to withdraw to their main position in the Moglena Valley. There was violent reciprocal artillery fire west and east of the Vardar.

ASKS FOR $5,000,000 TO SUCCOR ARMENIA

American Committee Starts Biggest Undertaking of Mercy Since Relief of Belgium.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The greatest American Relief Campaign to be undertaken since organization of the Belgian Relief Commission was launched today by the American Committee for Armenian and Syrian Relief. An exhaustive summary of the whole Armenian and Syrian situation was made public and will be sent to ministers of 120,000 churches all over the country and to many leading citizens and relief organizations.

A fund of $5,000,000 is called for to relieve 1,000,000 destitute, exiled and starving Armenians and Syrians scattered broadcast over Turkey, Persia, Syria and Palestine. The appeal declares that of nearly 2,000,000 Armenians originally in their native country, three-quarters of a million have been massacred or have died of wounds, disease or exhaustion since the war began.

The allied blockade has been lifted to allow passage of the supplies. Oct. 21 and 22 have been set aside by proclamation by President Wilson as relief days.

"People were found eating grass, herbs, and locusts," says the committee in describing its investigation of conditions in Armenia, "and in desperate cases dead animals and human bodies are reported to have been eaten. In some cases men were lined up so that several could be shot with one bullet in order not to waste ammunition. A mother said that not a girl above 12 (and some younger) in the village of —— escaped violation. The people kill and eat the street dogs. A short time ago they killed and ate a dying man.

"Of 450 from one village only one woman lives. She saw her husband and three sons tied together and shot with one bullet to save ammunition. She saw her daughter outraged and then killed. She was carried away by a Kurd but escaped by night, naked, and after terrible suffering fell in with some refugees.

"In the literal sense of the word, 100,000 to 120,000 armenians arrived at Etchmiadzin, stripped even of their outer garments. There 11,000 died and 40,000 more in the country."

RELIEF CALL TO JEWS.

Warburg Urges Them to Continue United Effort to Aid Europeans.

Felix M. Warburg, Chairman of the Joint Distribution Committee of the Jewish War Relief Funds in this country, addressed an open letter to the Jews of America yesterday urging them not to form new collecting agencies for individual funds, as has been proposed in some quarters since the entry of Rumania into the war. Mr. Warburg presents a brief report of the distributions made by the joint committee in his letter, and urges that Jews continue in their united effort through the established agencies to remedy the conditions of war sufferers of all the countries at war.

The American Jewish Relief Committee, the Central Relief Committee, and the People's Relief Committee, he reports, have raised about $6,000,000 in all, which has been distributed by the joint committee. Of this amount, he reports, $1,800,000 has been distributed in Russia, $1,454,500 in German Poland, $1,065,000 in Austria-Hungary, (including Galicia,) $403,788.69 in Palestine, $132,325 in Greece and Turkey other than Palestine, $21,000 in Alexandria, and in addition two appropriations of $50,000 were sent to Russia for the relief of prisoners of war and refugee women and children from Galicia.

"We feel that this threatened division of effort will result in a great injustice," says Mr. Warburg. "Who is to take care of those countries or districts which are not represented here by a powerful federation? Can we imagine it possible for each federation to manage to limit its canvass for funds to those who are members of its own organization?

"There is no need, no necessity, and no justice in the establishment of collecting agencies for individual countries or cities in the war zones. I ask the Jewish public to combine to make its contributions to the local Treasurers to whom they have till now been accustomed to remit their contributions."

Similar appeals were sent out yesterday by Louis Marshall, Leon Kamaiky, and Meyer London, the Chairmen of the three committees represented by the joint committee.

NO WORRY OVER BREMEN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 3.—Commenting on the report in THE NEW YORK TIMES of the finding of the lifebuoy marked "Bremen," Imperial Councilor von Braun of the Ministry of the Interior, who is the official source of information regarding merchant submarines, said today:

"It sounds very improbable. At least we have received no unfavorable news regarding the submarine Bremen and have no occasion to be worried about her.

"The report of the finding of a lifebuoy reached us three days ago. Investigation was at once made. It discloses the fact that there was neither a man by the name of Eppinghoven in Wilhelmshaven nor any one of that name aboard the Bremen. The report would, therefore, seem to be a swindle."

GERMANS HIT BACK WITH OLD-TIME FURY

ENGLISH GET INTO LE SARS

Patrols Enter Village, but Retire Later—New Bavarian Troops Suffer Heavy Losses.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Monday, Oct. 2, (Dispatch to The London Daily Chronicle.)—A general advance was made yesterday on a front of about three miles north of Courcelette, Martinpuich, and Flers to the outskirts of Le Sars and to the north of Eaucourt l'Abbaye. Fighting began about 3:30 in the afternoon, continuing all night, with heavy German counterattacks from the north.

Today there can be, I think, no great progress made because the weather is now dead against the British, having broken up so badly that the battlefields are lost in mist. Observation is made impossible for the artillery and air service. Out there in craterland and beyond it, (for the British have gone beyond the edge of the tumbled earth to the beginning of fields still growing something better than weeds,) the infantry on both sides are fighting at close quarters in bombing attacks for bits of trenches still held by the Germans, and digging in for cover until they get the chance of another pounce forward.

The character of the present fighting is weird and full of queer surprises. It is not easy to find any definite plan in the German mind to establish a line upon which he is ready to give battle. Here and there, as to the north of Courcelette, the British push forward as patrols and find a thin wall of men against them, which crumbles and breaks before them. At other places not far away, as in the German trenches before Le Sars and Eaucourt l'Abbaye, the ground is strongly held and crowded with men, as though the Germans are determined to defend this line at all costs and in strength.

I was inclined to believe until this morning that the Germans were withdrawing to a new line, leaving behind only a thin screen of men with machine guns as outposts to fight rear guard actions covering the retreat. There have been many signs lately that this was the Germans' plan forced upon them by hard necessity, but suddenly they have come back, counterattacking much more boldly and resolutely than during recent days.

New German Guns Brought Up.

The prisoners I saw this morning down from Eaucourt l'Abbaye had orders to hold the ground at all hazards, and denied that there was any idea of falling back willingly as part of a general plan. It is noticeable, too, that yesterday the German artillery barrage was increasingly violent, as though they had brought up new batteries, and was closer to the British rather than drawing away. All that is puzzling—to me. Doubtless the riddle has been read by the British experts, and possibly there is a gradual withdrawal masked by sharp counterblows to check the quickness of the British advance.

They seemed to have known what was coming yesterday, for shortly after 3:30, when the British troops left their trenches for the open ground, the German artillery opened fire upon them and the support trenches with savage intensity. It was too late to check the British at the parapets. They went over and away. Some of them were men who had fought in several of the great battles—men blooded or varnished, as the French say, in the fierce fighting of early days. Others were new men—fellows fresh at the front and unused to the scream of shells and terrors of the battlefield. It made no difference who they were—veterans of Ypres or Loos or innocents from the training camps on the safer side of the Channel. They went over at that quick trudge, now and then breaking into a double, which is the way men charge. A tribute to the new lads was spoken by some of the old boys in this grim school today.

"They didn't look around to get scared—and there was enough to scare them—but just went on, breathing hard, with their eyes on fire and keen to get ahead. Lots of 'em dropped with the best of us. There was no kind of difference. Into the first trench and onto the second; that was what was in their heads, and nothing could have stopped them except a bullet in the wrong place."

800-Yard Dash Under Fire.

Well, the new "draft" had gone as fast as the others. They had to go something like 800 yards to their first goal in front of Eaucourt l'Abbaye, which was part of the German third line trench. Behind that, another 200 yards on, was a second trench, built hurriedly since July 1 in case of accidents. It was the "accident" which now arrived. That 800 yards was a long stretch of open country to cross, especially when swept by machine gun fire. There was a gully or a little bit of a valley running across the Martinpuich-Eaucourt Road, and the German machine guns had emplacements in the side of it covering this field of fire. They chattered horribly as the British swept past, and the swish of bullets slashed the ground. Near to Eaucourt l'Abbaye the ground was thick with what the British describe as red cabbages, but what must have been, I think, sugar beets. The men kicked them as they tramped on toward the Germans, using the roots as footballs in a queer kind of a game to play on the way to a trench full of enemies, under showers of shrapnel and through the patter of machine gun bullets.

There were not many Germans left alive in either the first or second trench defending the old monastery. It was heaped with corpses, killed by the British bombardment, which lasted from 7 in the morning until this hour of the afternoon. The few machine-gunners there who were firing upon the British until they were within a yard or two held up their hands. It was rather late. Others ran back to the second trench, and then, if they had the luck to get as far, disappeared into the ruins.

German Giants on the Run.

Behind were tall men belonging to the Sixth Bavarian Division, fresh from Lille, which they had been holding since September, 1914, and that is the last division to be put into this battle of the Somme. A small English lad says some of them were giants. They looked enormously big to him in those moments of excitement.

It was the experience of the men not only here outside Eaucourt l'Abbaye, but on the left outside Le Sars, where a double line of trenches was also taken. There the Germans did not stand up to the British. They ran as soon as their bayonets showed.

Patrols were pushed out at night into Eaucourt and around it on the northwestern side, where we have dug in. Into Le Sars also went patrol parties, moving up through the broken streets of that long straggling village, which are now only rubbish heaps and empty shells and great pits in old roadways. Later in the night the Germans brought up reserves, and the British patrols withdrew before them. There was heavy fighting along the trenches where the British established themselves, and today the Germans are still in a wedge with the bottleneck down through Eaucourt and to the east of the Martinpuich road. They also seem to be strong in Le Sars and in a little quadrilateral redoubt just to the right of it below the deep cutting.

Heavy German Casualties.

The prisoners from Eaucourt seemed to me not so big as were described by the lad who saw one seven foot high. Rather they seemed to me less good in physique than most of the men fighting against the British on the Somme.

One German stretcher bearer says that on Sept. 30 his company was 190 strong. Since then it has had 130 casualties, made up of 17 dead, 40 buried, 73 wounded. Some of the companies of this Sixth Bavarian Division from Lille lost 75 per cent. of their strength since coming into the line. They cry out against this massacre. They blame their Commander, their air service, and artillery for the awful state in which they find themselves. In the diary of an officer of the One Hundred and Eightieth Regiment—those who defended Thiepval—there was a defense made to the Germans shrapneling their own trenches, and the sentence was underlined to give it special emphasis: "In view of the perfectly lamentable shooting of our own artillery, our patrols are called in."

WEATHER HINDERS FIGHTING ON SOMME

British Still Engaged Around Eaucourt—French Capture a Strong Trench

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Owing to the heavy rain and the necessity of consolidating the new positions, there was very little fighting on the Somme front today. The British, however, were kept busy in the sector of Eaucourt l'Abbaye, where the Germans are stubbornly holding the ground. The British War Office announced tonight that the fighting there "is proceeding satisfactorily."

The French forces captured a trench on the Péronne-Bapaume Road, north of Rancourt, taking prisoner 123 Germans. The French artillery continues its methodic bombardment of the German lines south of the Somme.

The British night report reads as follows:

> Rain continued to fall heavily during the night and the earlier part of the day. The fighting at Eaucourt l'Abbaye is proceeding satisfactorily. Elsewhere, except for intermittent shelling, our front has been quiet. In the past twenty-four hours we have taken fifty-one prisoners.
>
> The weather has interfered with the work of the aircraft. One of our machines is missing.

The British day report said:

> The night was quiet south of the Ancre.
>

French Capture 123 Germans.

> On the Somme front a local attack on both sides of the Péronne-Bapaume road placed us in possession of an important trench north of Rancourt. We made prisoner three officers and 120 men.
>
> South of the river there was considerable artillery and trench-gun activity at various points. On the remainder of the front nothing occurred.

The French afternoon communiqué follows:

> North of the Somme there was a rather violent artillery duel. In the region north of Rancourt the Germans attempted to debouch from the St. Pierre Vaast Wood. Our curtain of fire and machine guns immediately forced them back into their trenches. We took some prisoners.
>

Berlin Announces Gains.

BERLIN, Oct. 3, (via London.)—Heavy fighting continued north of the Somme yesterday. The War Office announced today that ground had been gained by the Germans in the Thiepval region. The statement follows:

> Army Group of Grand Duke Albrecht of Württemberg—Near Lombaertzyde, (Belgium,) close to the coast, our marines, as a result of a successful patrol enterprise, brought in twenty-two French prisoners.
>
> Army Group of Prince Rupprecht—The battle north of the Somme continued under persistent and powerful artillery fire from both sides. North of Thiepval and northwest of Courcelette we wrested from the British some trench portions in which they had established themselves, thereby capturing several machine guns.
>
> The fighting was especially bitter between Le Sars and the road from Ligny-Thilloy to Flers. Here the British purchased with the heaviest sacrifices a small gain in territory on both sides of the Eaucourt l'Abbaye Farm. Between Gueudecourt and Morval our artillery, after repulsing four attacks from Les Boeufs, held the enemy's infantry within its storming positions.
>
> Strong French attacks on and west of the Sailly-Rancourt road and against the St. Pierre Vaast Wood succeeded in places in penetrating our first line of defense, which, however, was cleared out as a result of hand-to-hand fighting.
>
> South of the Somme on the front on both sides of Vermandovillers the artillery duels increased appreciably in intensity at times. The French, who attempted an attack, were stifled by our curtain of fire.

Disaster Causes a Suicide.

BERLIN, Oct. 3, (by Wireless to Sayville.)—According to a dispatch from Prague, Bohemia, to the Overseas News Agency, Councilor Podnaiski, constructor of the Weissendesse Valley dam, which recently collapsed, causing heavy loss of life, has committed suicide. LORD BRYCE DECRIES HATRED OF GERMANY

Urges the Churches to Influence the People in Framing Peace Terms.

OPPOSES TRADE WARFARE

Such a Policy After the War, He Says, Has "Immense Capacities for Mischief."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Viscount Bryce, speaking today at Birmingham before the Congregational Union, said that on the terms of the treaty of peace the people would insist on expressing an opinion. In order to express an opinion they must form an opinion, and the churches must do their part in helping form it. With regard to the making of peace he counseled Englishmen to repress the spirit of hatred. Was it wise, he asked, to talk of banning a whole people for all time to come? The German people had themselves to learn the truth about the crimes of the war. To indulge in revenge would be to sow the seeds of future wars. Nations could not hate one another forever. Serious terms might have to be imposed on the foe, but they ought not to be imposed in any spirit of hatred.

Lord Bryce said it had been suggested that after peace had been concluded a new war of trade was to follow the war of arms. The proposal, he said, had immense capacities for mischief. Such a trade war would prolong and embitter afresh those hatreds that ought to be allowed to die. He urged his hearers to consult reason rather than passion.

BRYCE'S PEACE VIEWS GIVE TAFT NEW HOPE

He Sees in Them Assurance of England's Purpose to Prevent Other Wars.

Ex-President Taft, who came to the city late yesterday evening to attend the Republican reunion at the Union League Club, was moved to discuss world peace in the future by Viscount Bryce's article in the special American edition of The Manchester Guardian, as reported in cable dispatches yesterday morning.

"Viscount Bryce's article," he said, "and more especially the fact that The Manchester Guardian, the great provincial organ of Liberal opinion, has published a special number in which a large amount of space is devoted to the League to Enforce Peace, is one of the most hopeful things that has happened in the last two years. It is hopeful because it shows in a convincing way that the thoughts of England's statesmen and leaders of opinion are turning toward the future; that they are anxiously considering what can be done after the war to prevent a recurrence of such suffering and calamities as Europe is now enduring.

"The thought of the world is turning more and more definitely to America as the hope of the world, and this may be due in no small degree to the propaganda carried on by the League to Enforce Peace. The league offers a definite program which does not go into details, but is confined to these fundamental propositions: A league of nations to establish an international court to try causes of disputes between nations, a council of conciliation to compose differences that cannot properly be brought before the court, conferences to formulate and codify rules of international law, and the concerted use of economic pressure and military force by all the signatory powers against any member nation that begins war or even threatens to begin war upon another member of the league without first submitting its grievance to court or council and awaiting a decision.

"One may reasonably question whether the United States by uniting with the other great powers to prevent the recurrence of a future world war may not risk less in assuming the obligations of a member of the league than by refusing to become such a member in view of her worldwide interests.

"But even if the risk of war to the United States would be greater by entering the league than by staying out of it, does not the United States have a duty as a member of the family of nations to do its part and run its necessary risk to make less probable the coming of such another war and such another disaster to the human race?"

ITALIANS CAPTURE TWO LOFTY PEAKS

ROME, Oct. 3.—Italian Alpine troops have gained a new and important success in the Trentino district, the War Office announced today. Italian infantry in the Cismon-Brenta Valley climbed the steep slopes of the second peak of Col Bricon (8,463 feet high) under a heavy fire and captured the summit. The first peak is already in the hands of the Italians.

In the Carnia region the Italians captured another peak, 8,989 feet high, after first cutting it off by a turning movement.

The official communication follows:

Enemy artillery has insistently shelled villages in the Astico Valley and on the Asiago plateau. Of these, Arsiero suffered some damage.

Our offensive operations in the mountains have resulted in some new successes. At the head of the Cismon-Brenta Valley our troops, after climbing under the enemy fire precipitous walls, succeeded in capturing the second peak of Col Bricon, at the southwest of the first peak, 2,604 meters (8,643 feet) high, which was already in our possession.

In the upper Cordevole during the night of the 1st a determined bombing attack against one of our advanced positions on the slopes of Monte Stef was decisively repulsed with losses to the enemy.

In Carnia, between Monte Coglians and Pizzocollina, on the upper But, our detachments, after having by a turning movement cut off a high peak held by the Austrians, succeeded in reaching the summit, at a height of 2,766 meters (8,989 feet.) The enemy left behind arms, munitions, and war materials.

In the Carso front the enemy artillery has increased its activity against inhabited villages, shelling our lines on the left bank of the Vallone River. An enemy aeroplane dropped bombs on Agords, Cordevole, but without causing damage.

CHANCELLOR'S POLICY ASSAILED IN GERMANY

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 3, (via London.)—The Lokal-Anzeiger of Berlin says the resumption of the sittings of the Reichstag, adjourned after the delivery of Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg's speech until Oct. 5, has been postponed until Oct. 11. This decision was reached yesterday at a meeting of the main committee which was attended by the Chancellor and his staff. The postponement is said to be due to the fact that the work of the committees is not proceeding so rapidly as had been expected.

Telegraphing from Amsterdam, the correspondent of the Central News says:

"It is generally believed that the postponement of the meeting of the Reichstag is due to dissatisfaction with the speech of Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg. In the meantime strenuous efforts will be made to reconcile the people to the Imperial Chancellor's policy.

"Meetings have been hurriedly arranged to be held in a number of towns where members of the Reichstag will make addresses. A public mass meeting at Frankfort passed a resolution in favor of an early peace.

"The Vossische Zeitung says that Chancellor von Bethmann Hollweg had a long conversation on Oct. 1 with Prince von Bülow, the former Chancellor."

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 3.—The agitation against the Chancellor continues unabated, and it is taking on ever new and interesting forms, one of the latest being a circular letter sent to numerous conservative and National liberal Reichstag members calling on the Reichstag to compass Von Bethmann-Hollweg's fall in the strongest terms.

The letter is signed by Professor Ernst Haeckel, Admiral von Knorr, Privy Councillor Körting of Hanover and others. While the signatories are politically of no very large importance, further developments are at least worth watching.

WHOLE RUSSIAN LINE IN FIERCE BATTLES

RUSSIANS GAIN IN GALICIA

PETROGRAD, Oct. 3.—German forces have taken the offensive south of Dvinsk, attacking the Russian lines in force near Novo Alexandrovsk, the War Office announced today. They were met by an intense defensive fire from the Russian guns, however, and forced back to their positions.

In the region west of Lutsk, near Zaturze, the Russians have made advances in stubborn fighting.

In the Zlota Lipa district and along other sectors of the front in Galicia, fighting of a desperate nature is continuing, neither side scoring any marked advantage. In one sector the Russians took more than 1,000 prisoners yesterday, and the total taken in the region of the Oeniuvka in the fighting since Friday last is reported at more than 5,000 men.

In the region east of Novo Alexandrovsk, about 6 o'clock in the evening, after artillery preparation, dense German columns endeavored to advance beyond their wire entanglements but were driven back to their trenches by our fire.

On the river Sereth the enemy bombarded our positions in the Krinkio-Stashin sector and an hour after midnight launched an attack which was frustrated by our fire.

In the neighborhood of Zaturze, Vola Savovskaia and Shelvov stubborn fighting is taking place. Our troops at some places captured portions of enemy positions. The enemy is showing the most stubborn resistance.

On the River Ceniuvka and in the region of the heights on the right bank of the Zlota Lipa, stubborn battles continue. The enemy, having brought considerable reserves to the River Ceniuvka, launched a counterattack which was frustrated by our fire, with severe losses to the enemy. Fierce fighting is still proceeding. In this region yesterday more than 1,000 prisoners were taken. The total number of prisoners taken in this region during the three battles of Saturday, Sunday and Monday is more than 5,000, among whom are eight German officers and 600 German men.

Berlin Tells of Russian Attacks.

BERLIN, Oct. 3, (via London.)—Strong attacks made yesterday by the Russians were repulsed by the Teutonic forces, the War Office announced today. The statement follows:

Army group of Prince Leopold: From the army group of General von Linsingen it is reported that the general attack expected against the troops west of Lutsk under Lieut. Gen. Schmidt von Knobelddorf, the groups under General von der Marwitz, and the army under von Tersztyanski began yesterday morning, after an extraordinarily intense artillery preparation.

From 9 o'clock in the morning Russian troops were thrown forward in large numbers, regardless of losses. A Russian corps stormed twelve times and two guard corps seventeen times. The Fourth Army Corps, which recently was defeated so decisively near Korytniza, apparently has disappeared from the enemy's line.

All the enemy's attacks collapsed, with most exceptionally heavy losses. Where enemy detachments were able to penetrate completely demolished trenches, as they did north of Zaturze, they were at once driven out by a counterattack. Russian artillery, by repeatedly directing its fire on its own trenches, forced the troops to advance or attempted to stem the returning waves and compelled them to return once more to the attack. It is ascertained that enemy detachments which temporarily penetrated some of our trenches killed our wounded who had been left behind. Our losses were comparatively small.

The success of the counterattack made north of Graberka (in Galicia on the front northeast of Lemberg) has been extended. The number of prisoners brought in has been increased to forty-one officers and 2,578 men. The booty amounts to thirteen machine guns.

Army group of Archduke Charles Francis: Continuing their attacks on the eastern bank of the Zlota Lipa, (on the front southeast of Lemberg,) the Russians succeeded in advancing to Lysonia Height, southeast of Brzezany. They were driven back by German, Austro-Hungarian and Turkish troops.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 3, (via London.)—The capture of 500 Russians by Turkish troops fighting on the Galician front is announced in today's War Office statement, reporting the repulse of Russian attacks upon positions occupied by the Turks. The statement says:

On the Galician front the Russians renewed their assaults Sunday morning. We repulsed all attacks. We captured in the fighting of Saturday and Sunday morning five officers and 500 men.

FEARS LLOYD GEORGE MAY ALIENATE US

WANTS NEUTRAL SYMPATHY

Suggests That the War Minister Should Leave All Such Matters to Asquith and Grey.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The Manchester Guardian, which hitherto abstained from comment on Lloyd George's so-called "hands-off interview," today devotes a long leading article to the doubts entertained in many quarters as to whether the interview served any useful purpose for the Allies.

The Northcliffe papers distinguished themselves by their encomiums on the opportuneness and value of the interview, but after the first day's appreciation of the fact that the Minister for War had put into vivid phrase the determination of the whole country to prosecute the war to a finish other organs dropped the subject.

Comments which have been cabled from America indicate that the most important section of the American press paid no editorial attention to the interview. The Washington correspondent of The London Times cabled:

"Although there has not been a conspicuous amount of journalistic comment on this utterance, it may be said with assurance that nothing that any British public man has said since the beginning of the war has stood us in better stead."

Resents an Interpretation.

The Manchester Guardian takes a different view, stating that "much of the press comment from America differs much from what Lloyd George said," and instancing the Staats-Zeitung's representation of Lloyd George as crying, "Hands off!" to neutrals. "What Lloyd George himself declares against is any intervention or interference, but friendly discussion is not intervention, and proffers of mediation are not necessarily interference," says The Manchester Guardian. "No one dreamed that the United States or any other neutral would go beyond such completely friendly offices, or even so far, without ascertaining that they would be acceptable. Yet, by adroit use of the interview, the pro-German paper is enabled to flaunt a phrase of no very courteous sound in the ears of the American public."

The Guardian draws the conclusion that "distinguished Ministers do best when they preserve silence on matters not relating to their own departments."

"It is both unjust to this country and a serious disservice to its cause," the editorial continues, "to represent it as unwilling to listen to the views of neutrals, and to be bent on anything like a war of annihilation. Everybody, Germany included, is aware that the indirect value of the sympathy of neutrals, particularly in the United States, has been and is of high importance. In the future this importance will increase in proportion as the United States is awakening to the significance of the world war for its own future. America grows relatively stronger as Europe exhausts itself, and it is not to be expected nor, we should say, to be desired that it should be left out of the councils of peace. It is in America that we find the strongest and clearest body of pacific opinion and the greatest desire to make the cause of permanent peace throughout the world an integral part of the national policy. European democracies, wearied of the slaughter and fearing its indefinite recurrence, will turn to any quarter whence comes a strong promise of opposition to the permanent fastening of militarism on their backs, and, far from resenting, they will welcome the representatives of the greatest and most peaceful of democracies in a congress which must seek somehow to re-establish a ruined world.

"Any one in this country who wilfully or carelessly alienates America throws away quite gratuitously one of our great and permanent assets as a democratic people fighting for the rights of nations against military autocracy."

Arms German Militarists.

After saying it is not "the business of our statesmen to stimulate the most desperate efforts of Germany by phrases, which, however small their tangible meaning and value, will be represented in that country as threats of something like political annihilation, for as a nation we want to inflict nothing of the kind," the Guardian concludes:

"What is important is the indication of the growing ascendancy of civil government in Germany over the military, which has been the real enemy of the world. At such a juncture it is surely most regrettable that anything should be said here which will strengthen the hands of the German war party by appearing to justify their assertions against England. Nor is it in the interest of this country that declarations as to its aims and intentions should be made except by those directly responsible for its foreign affairs, that is, say either Mr. Asquith or Viscount Grey. These Ministers, if there is anywhere talk of mediation, should have their hands perfectly free to enter into the discussion or to refuse, as at the juncture may seem to them most in the interest of the nation. Their decision ought not to be prejudiced or in any way hampered by the utterances of any colleague whose responsibility is for another, and that a sufficiently vast and difficult, department of our affairs."

VICTOR CARLSTROM. GLENN H. CURTISS.

CHICAGO-NEW YORK FLIGHT FOR THE TIMES

Chicago by express, and a date will be set for the flight as early as possible next week. It is recognized that, in view of the possibility of severe weather, which would make a flight at such an unusually difficult, the attempt must be made as early as possible.

Capable of Ninety-five Miles an Hour.

The machine which Carlstrom will use was designed by Henry Kleckner, chief designer of the Curtiss Aeroplane Company, and has an engine built by Charles B. Kirkland, chief engineer of the Curtiss Motor Company. This is an eight-cylinder affair of the same type as used in the army biplanes and while nominally rated as 160 horse power actually develops more than 200. The machine is capable of from eighty-five to ninety-five miles an hour, and it is hoped that a favorable wind will push the velocity well up over the hundred-mile mark.

The normal fuel capacity of the Model R., about ninety gallons, has been increased in this machine, by the building in of additional tanks, to 165 gallons. Additional panels have been added to the planes so that a wing spread which reaches forty-eight feet in the army planes is sixty feet in Carlstrom's machine. It is not certain, however, that this feature will be retained. It adds considerably to the lifting capacity and was added to the machine when it was expected that it would be used for an attempt at a time record with five passengers. Experiment may prove that it will be needless for the purposes of THE TIMES flight.

Among Carlstrom's previous achievements have been a non-stop flight from Newport News to New York, a distance of slightly more than 400 miles; a continuous flight with one passenger of 641 miles in eight hours and forty minutes around a course between Newport News and Cape Charles, and a flight from Toronto to New York by a route which made the distance something like 600 miles in six hours and forty minutes of actual flying time, one stop having been necessitated during the trip.

If he succeeds in the flight from Chicago he will probably break all records for distance covered, with the exception of that made by W. Landmann at Berlin on June 26, 1914. Landmann flew for 21 hours 48 minutes and 15 seconds around a closed circuit and covered a greater distance than Carlstrom's route from Chicago to New York, but there were no difficulties in his way. What is probably the longest cross-country flight on record was made last Summer by a French officer whose name was not given out. He started from the French lines on the western front, flew over Berlin, and then started for the Russian lines in Volhynia, but was compelled to descend at Cholm, about fifty miles short, on account of lack of fuel and was captured by the Germans. This was a distance of about 850 miles presumably covered without any stops, but the Chicago-New York route is considerably longer.

Carlstrom Confident.

Carlstrom is quietly confident of his ability to make the record trip without trouble and to operate the first aeroplane mail route in the continental United States.

"I wouldn't try it," he said, "if I didn't think I'd get away with it." Mr. Curtiss, Mr. Kirkland, and other officials of the Curtiss Company are equally confident. Carlstrom is the star of their staff of fliers, and as one of them expressed it, "He doesn't deliberately do stunts that amount to looking for trouble, but he can duplicate with ease anything that anybody else can do."

WASHINGTON GIVES CONSENT.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Otto Praeger, Second Assistant Postmaster General in charge of the transportation of the United States Mails, authorized THE NEW YORK TIMES today to conduct an experimental mail-carrying aeroplane service between Chicago and New York. Tomorrow the Post Office Department will issue an order establishing an aeroplane route between Chicago and New York for the period beginning Oct. 7 and ending Nov. 1.

The department, through Mr. Praeger, directed that Victor Carlstrom, the aviator, and Elmer Davis of THE TIMES staff be designated as agents of the department to conduct the experimental route.

> Post Office Department,
> Office of the Second Assistant Postmaster General,
> Washington, Oct. 3, 1916.
> Managing Editor, NEW YORK TIMES,
> Times Square, New York:
>
> Dear Sir: Your application for permission to operate an experimental aeroplane mail route from Chicago to New York, addressed to the Postmaster General, has been referred to me for reply.
>
> The department will take great pleasure in authorizing this aeroplane route and will properly designate Mr. Davis and Mr. Carlstrom as its agents in conducting the experiment. The department will also gladly avail itself of the opportunity of sending a pouch of regular mail in addition to the post card mail referred to in your letter. Directions will be given to Captain E. L. West, Superintendent Railway Mail Service, Sixth Division Headquarters at Chicago, to arrange, in connection with your agents for the movement of the mail in accordance with the plan outlined in your letter. You may take up the details of the experiment direct with Captain West.
> Formal order designating this as an official aeroplane route of the Post Office Department will follow tomorrow.
>
> I am returning herewith the postal card with printing on the address side, and will state that this complies with the postal laws and regulations. Yours very truly,
>
> OTTO PRAEGER,
> Second Assistant Postmaster General.

Mr. Praeger expressed great interest in the plan of THE TIMES to attempt a sunrise-to-sunset air flight for mail-carrying purposes from Chicago to New York.

"This," he said, "is one of the most practicable aeroplane proposals that has been presented to the department, because it affords an opportunity actually to move mail between the two largest cities of the country, its two chief commercial centres, nearly a thousand miles apart, in less than one-half the time taken between the same places by the fastest mail trains. The department is glad to help along experiments of this sort and has given prompt approval to the experiment of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

"Just as soon as aeroplane manufacturers are ready to turn their attention from war to the field of peaceful commercial endeavor, we will be ready to make contracts with them."

Aviator Carlstrom expects to leave Chicago in THE TIMES mail-carrying aeroplane as early as 6 o'clock in the morning and reach New York about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, or in nine hours, allowing for the fact that the proposed time of starting is 7 o'clock in New York. The last mail train leaving Chicago for New York prior to that time is scheduled to start at 2:50 o'clock in the morning. It overtakes another New York mail train which leaves Chicago at 11:35 o'clock on the previous evening, and the two trains are joined and arrive in New York as one train at 4:01 o'clock the following morning, a period of twenty-seven hours and twenty-six minutes for the section which left at 11:35 o'clock and twenty-four hours and eleven minutes for the section leaving later, allowing for the fact that there is a difference of one hour between New York and Chicago time. This is something more than seventeen hours and fifteen hours slower, respectively, than the time within which THE TIMES mail-carrying aeroplane is expected to make the journey from Chicago to New York.

Another fast mail train takes twenty-five hours and twenty-seven minutes actual time to make the trip; another twenty hours and still another twenty-three hours.

It will be seen from this that the fastest mail train from Chicago to New York is eleven hours slower than the time schedule for Carlstrom's flight or more than double the time in which Carlstrom expects to make the flight.

In addition to assisting in every way to handle the mail in Chicago to be forwarded from that city to New York in the aeroplane, the Post Office Department will afford all facilities for the prompt delivery in New York of mail carried in the experimental flight. It is intended that the mail which leaves Chicago in the morning in Carlstrom's charge shall be delivered in New York late that afternoon or early that evening.

CARLSTROM'S FLYING RECORDS

Made One Trip of 641 Miles in Eight Hours and 40 Minutes.

Aviators and aeroplane builders here said yesterday that they regarded Carlstrom's proposed non-stop flight from Chicago to New York as one of the greatest of aviation undertakings. Carlstrom is regarded as the one aviator in the country whose cross-country flights have given him the experience necessary for this attempt and his previous records indicate that he will succeed.

Carlstrom's most recent flight was on Aug. 25, at Newport News, when he flew the Curtiss twin-motor military biplane, 641 miles in eight hours and forty minutes. Previous to that he flew a machine of the same type from Newport News to Sheepshead Bay. On May 24, with Alan R. Hawley as passenger, he flew from Sheepshead Bay to Washington, a distance of 237 miles, which he completed in 187 minutes. His first great long-distance flight was on Nov. 26, 1915, when he flew, with one stop for gasoline, from Toronto to this city. He traveled about 600 miles on this occasion and completed the trip after being 400 minutes in the air.

Carlstrom was born in Gustaf Fahn Lan, Sweden, and is twenty-six years old. He is an American citizen and received his pilot's license in 1912, after taking his tests at Dominguez Field, near Los Angeles, Cal.

OPPONENTS DISTURB FAIR CAMPAIGNERS

CLEVELAND MORE CORDIAL

But There, Too, Speakers Are Flustered, Crowd Asking About Hughes's Part in Hatters' Decision

Special to The New York Times.

ON WOMEN'S HUGHES CAMPAIGN TRAIN, Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 3.—Two things tonight are distressing the women spellbinders who addressed meetings in Buffalo this afternoon and Cleveland this evening. The first is as to who passed the word in Buffalo that the transcontinental trip was really a suffragist venture, and that the slogan "Votes for Hughes" was merely a cloak. The other problem is what to do with the ardent Wilson supporters who persist in inviting themselves to the meetings and asking information as to where Mr. Hughes stands on national issues.

After attending a breakfast in Rochester given by members of the Century Club, the orators had so little time left in the city that they decided to forego speechmaking and boarded the train for Buffalo. Throughout the three-hour run the women busied themselves preparing their speeches, and—this is unofficial—in deciding which gown to wear to greet the committee of 200 men and women expected to be on hand to meet the train.

When Buffalo was reached, however, they found only twenty women awaiting. When Mrs. Russell W. Bryant, Chairman of the committee, met Miss Frances A. Kellor, head of the campaigners, the details of a plot came out. According to Mrs. Bryant, every item of the arrangements had been satisfactorily worked out, and every committee man and woman had agreed to serve. But last night some one, by telephone and telegram, notified the members of the committee that the incoming train was loaded with train suffrage orators, and that the advance notices about Hughes were all sham. When they were told this the committee folk, largely anti-suffrage, dwindled from 200 to 20. Mrs. Bryant spent hours assuring all of the real purpose of the campaigners, but the damage could not be repaired.

The news that enemies were at work was received grimly. Dr. Katharine B. Davis took action promptly. She went to the rear platform of the train and explained to the small group there, mostly trainmen and yardmen, how the object of all the speeches was to get votes for a man and not for women. As Dr. Davis finished seven trainmen, standing by the car, but out of sight of the campaigners, shouted for Wilson and gave eight cheers—one for each hour of the eight-hour law, as they afterward explained.

Finally, after their indignation had somewhat subsided, the members of the party were taken in automobiles to the Star Theatre, where Mrs. Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Miss Maude E. Miner, Miss Mary Antin, and several others addressed an audience of nearly 1,000 persons. All the speakers talked straight politics. Whenever they drove home a good shot, instead of cheers there came a pattering of gloved hands and a flutter of handkerchiefs. The meeting was presided over by Daniel J. Kenefick.

While the meeting was on, the speakers, as fast as they finished, were put in motors and hustled to Shelton Square and Church Street, where they addressed a crowd of about fifty men. While Miss Annie S. Peck was telling of Mr. Hughes's record as Governor, a man, who emphatically announced that he was for Wilson all the way through, demanded to know what reason actuated Mr. Hughes in vetoing the "Two-Cent Car bill." Miss Peck replied that she did not know, as she had devoted herself to studying the broader phases of the Republican nominee's political activities. It was finally necessary to summon a traffic policeman, and the heckler was escorted around the corner and told to stay away.

Again, just when Miss Mary Antin had concluded a talk on Americanism, a short man with a loud voice pushed his way to the front and sought information about the Adamson eight-hour law. E. P. White, a Progressive who has returned to the Republican fold, undertook to answer the questions put, but other speakers in the automobile persuaded him to get into the machine, drive to the station and leave the heckler unanswered.

In marked contrast with all the meetings held thus far were the two tonight in Cleveland—one in the ballroom of the Hotel Hollenden and the other in the Public Square. Both were attended by more men than were in the audiences at all the previous meetings combined.

At the Hollenden the arrangements were in charge of a committee of women headed by Mrs. Myron T. Herrick, wife of the ex-Ambassador to France. The speakers were Dr. Katharine B. Davis, Mrs. Nelson O'Shaughnessy, Mrs. William Curtis Demorest, Miss Mary Antin, and others. They were introduced by Charles F. Thwing, President of Western Reserve University.

The speakers at the Public Square meeting were mostly the same as those at the hotel. The crowd of about 300, with very few women scattered through it, hurled question after question at the speakers, especially as to Mr. Hughes's record as a Justice in the Danbury Hatters' case. All the speakers, except Dr. Davis, were flustered. Mrs. Davis withstood the taunts and answered sharply. Finally, when it appeared that, if she were to answer the questioners one by one there would be little time left, she heatedly asked her tormentors to "leave the meeting and give her an opportunity to talk about the issues she had specialized in."

Toledo and Detroit are tomorrow's stands.

MRS. BOISSEVAIN OFF TODAY.

Her Anti-Wilson Speaking Tour Will Cover All Suffrage States.

Mrs. Inez Milholland Boissevain will start today on an anti-Wilson speaking tour, which will cover every important town in the States where women have the franchise. Mrs. Boissevain said yesterday she was the last of more than a hundred suffragists who have left New York this Summer on similar missions.

Mrs. Boissevain will make her first speech in Cheyenne, Wyo., the end of the week. She is representing the Congressional Union, a wing of the Women's Party which believes in trying to get the franchise by Federal amendment rather than by working and waiting for individual States to act. She is going alone, and once in the equal suffrage States she expects to make rear-platform speeches and to talk from automobiles as well as to deliver addresses in halls. The night before election she is scheduled to speak in Chicago, making a report of conditions in the territory she has covered.

PICTURES SEABURY AS PERKINS'S DEBTOR

Roosevelt Says the Ex-Judge Accepted the Progressive's Money and Support.

RECORD IN MILLER CASE

Lawyer, After Leaving Appeals Bench, Appeared in Stock Transfer Stamp Refund Litigation.

Colonel Roosevelt issued a vigorous reply yesterday to the attack on George W. Perkins made by Samuel Seabury, Democratic nominee for Governor, in his speech of acceptance. In his statement the Colonel pointed out that the indictment found against Mr. Perkins and later dismissed to which Mr. Seabury made reference was ten years old.

"Since this incident, which Mr. Seabury says affects him with horror, took place," Colonel Roosevelt said, "Mr. Seabury has been cheek by jowl with Mr. Perkins, has accepted his money and support, has been candidate on the ticket with him, recently has been seeking his influence, and would not have been on the Court of Appeals bench but for Mr. Perkins's support.

"In Seabury's case not only gratitude but the capacity for righteous indignation seems to be inexplicably mixed up with a lively sense of favors to come."

When Mr. Seabury, also in his speech of acceptance, attacked ex-Judge Nathan L. Miller as the attorney for special privilege interests and asserted that one of his own last acts on the bench was to file a dissenting opinion in a decision that allowed Mr. Nathan's clients "to get a large amount of public money upon a very flimsy pretext," he referred, so inquiry yesterday disclosed, to a suit brought against the State by a New York brokerage house. Van Antwerp, Bishop & Co. sought to recover $857.80, the cost of transfer stamps erroneously affixed to shares of stock sold by the firm, basing their contention on the Stock Transfer Act of 1910, which, superseding that of 1915, provided that the State Controller might refund the value of stamps erroneously affixed under the former statute, which the Court of Appeals had held to be unconstitutional.

The Controller refused to pay this claim, but the Court of Appeals decided in favor of the brokers.

Ex-Judge Nathan L. Miller did not come into the case until late and then as attorney for H. Content & Co., another firm of Wall Street brokers, which intervened in the proceedings before the Court of Appeals. There is nothing in the printed case to indicate the amount of his clients' claim, but one of the attorneys representing Van Antwerp, Bishop & Co. said it was less than $1,000.

Mr. Seabury said yesterday that he felt he was justified in all he had said in his speech of acceptance. He declared that the litigation was inspired by a number of brokers with claims aggregating many hundred thousand dollars.

ACCUSES PRESIDENT OF 8-HOUR JUGGLERY

Misstated Facts About Overtime Asked by Railroad Employes, Chairman Willcox Says.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—In a statement issued today, William R. Willcox, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, charged that President Wilson misstated the facts of the eight-hour controversy in his address to Congress on that subject and again in his Shadow Lawn speech dealing with the eight-hour law.

"President Wilson," said Mr. Willcox, "absolutely ignores the issue between the railway employes and their employers when he attempts to defend the railway wage-increase bill. In his efforts to create the impression that the men were striving to curtail their hours of labor and that what is popularly known as 'the eight-hour day' was involved, he ignores the facts. The men were seeking higher wages, not shorter hours. It was not a question of the eight-hour day, and it is hard to believe that Mr. Wilson does not know that.

"Mr. Wilson says the men demanded an eight-hour day and that the railroads pay them 'one-half more for overtime than they paid them for the time in the regular day.' The men demanded nothing of the kind. They did not demand an eight-hour day, and they did not demand one-half more for time in excess of eight hours than they demanded for the eight hours. That is clearly the impression Mr. Wilson would convey, but it is not a true impression."

EVOKES McCORMICK'S SARCASM

Calls Taft-Roosevelt Meeting a "Crow-Eating Contest."

Commenting last night on the meeting between ex-President Roosevelt and ex-President Taft, Vance McCormick, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said:

"I trust the people of New York and the entire country will pay particular attention to the 'crow-eating' contest between Theodore Roosevelt and ex-President Taft at the Union League Club tonight. One of the interested spectators was Charles E. Hughes. I am surprised he did not say something about his friend Jeremiah O'Leary. While Mr. Hughes may not know the gentleman personally, there is no question but O'Leary is a friend of his. No one doubts any more that Mr. Hughes has accepted the candidacy of the 'hyphenates' of the country. His silence on the insulting message sent the President proves that."

'THEODORE' GRASPS THE HAND OF 'WILL'

had been cheering enthusiastically for the Colonel, and when Mr. Hughes appeared the cheers for him mingled with those for Roosevelt.

"Three cheers and a tiger," shouted a club member.

"No, no, no tiger," cautioned another member. "We don't want any Tammany methods in this club." And the tiger wasn't given.

As Colonel Roosevelt plunged into the elevator, his old-time enemy, W. Murray Crane from Massachusetts, slipped a cautious way through the crowd and got in with him. He could be seen talking to the Colonel as the elevator rose. What he said was lost.

George R. Sheldon, former National Republican Treasurer, took Colonel Roosevelt in tow, and they strolled toward the alcove where the gathering of dignitaries was collected. There were perhaps twenty or thirty, and as they extended hands Colonel Roosevelt shook. He shook hands with Governor Whitman, with Mr. Calder, with Robert Bacon, with George Von L. Meyer, once a member of his Cabinet; with Chauncey M. Depew, and with General Horace Porter. And then, or about then, came Mr. Taft.

Sacred Line Bars Intrusion.

After this exchange of greetings they lined up to wait for the anxious horde in the hallways, held in formation by velvet ropes, which had been placed there to see that no newspaperman got by. If a newspaperman ventured even so little past the sacred line there was a loud command which tended to make the situation a trifle ridiculous at times.

The line in the alcove stiffened to meet the assault of the thousand or more. Here is the way they stood: Elihu Root, President of the club; Charles E. Hughes, Theodore Roosevelt, Chauncey M. Depew, William H. Taft, General Porter, Governor Whitman, Senator A. B. Fall of New Mexico, R. Livingston Beeckman, Governor of Rhode Island; National Chairman Willcox, Senator Weeks, George Von L. Meyer, Robert Bacon, W. Cameron Forbes, head of the Hughes Alliance.

It took an hour for the long line of men of a thousand shades and convictions in the field of politics to file by. They showed how glad they were to see the Colonel back in the ranks fighting for the success of the party. They were vigorous in their handshakes and in their words, but no more vigorous than the Colonel. He had no enemies that he would admit to be such with the possible exception of Mr. Taft in his efforts to get men working together to beat Mr. Wilson.

As the last man filed by—it was the biggest crowd ever inside the carefully guarded doors of the Union League—there was a rush for the room were speeches were to be heard. They cheered for Mr. Root, they cheered for Mr. Hughes, and heard him tell what he proposed to do if elected, and of the faults of Mr. Wilson. They roared for the Colonel when he stood up and smiled in a way that was almost an open peal of laughter.

Colonel Assails Germany.

Colonel Roosevelt in his address made no reference to Mr. Taft or to the matter of reconciliation. He did attack the German-Americans and refer with bitter words to the sinking of the Lusitania, which he termed "murder on the high sea," a term not employed by Mr. Hughes.

He said that there was a debate now in progress among the shapers of Germany's policy on the question of submarines. There would be no such debate, he said, if the Germans knew that there was in the White House a President who would not tolerate such methods.

President Wilson in his speech delivered on Saturday, Colonel Roosevelt said, had expressed his real convictions, namely, that "he tapped his adversary on the wrist." The Wilson policies, he said, were being upheld by men whose shoulders "sloped like champagne bottles."

Mr. Taft made the nearest thing to an offer of reconciliation with Roosevelt, but it went unanswered. He said: "We are holding one of those exceptional meetings of the ex-Presidents' club. It is not a large membership and the members do not always entertain complete harmony of views. But there is one subject on which we are unanimous to a point which cannot be exaggerated, and that is that we are going to elect in November another member."

How the Guests Were Seated.

At the supper the tables where sat the men who played the most prominent part in the drama were arranged in this manner:

No. 1—Elihu Root, Charles E. Hughes, William R. Willcox, William M. Calder, Governor Whitman, and Mr. Frew.

No. 2—Colonel Roosevelt, George R. Sheldon, Robert Bacon, Cornelius N. Bliss, Jr., R. A. C. Smith, and George W. Perkins.

No. 3—William H. Taft, Nicholas Murray Butler, Samuel W. Fairchild, J. Franklin Murphy, and James R. Sheffield.

Grouped about at a dozen other tables were most of the leading lights in politics in this section, all trying to make their different views match in a great love feast. They talked until the air seethed with politics and all that they should do. There was apparent, it seemed, the spirit at least of a fight to become reunited, although it seemed to hurt some of those who were there to do all the things that they did.

At the close of it all Colonel Roosevelt said good night to Mr. Hughes, wished him success and slipped away. Mr. Hughes, it was said, expressed delight at the way the evening had been passed.

SPEECH OF COL. ROOSEVELT.

An Arraignment of President's Recent Public Utterances.

Mr. President and fellow-members—We have had the good fortune—now I am measuring my words—we have had the good fortune to listen to the great speech of a great leader. It is the kind of a speech that is eminently proper in this club, a club formed in the dark days of the nation, in the days that tried men's souls, formed by men—I am happy to say that my father was one of the men—formed by men who dearly loved peace, and who loved righteousness more than peace; formed by men who did everything in their power to keep peace, who counseled a course of conduct which, if followed for the twenty years preceding the civil war, would have prevented war, but who, when, through the fault of others war came, did not shrink from the war. No man has a right to claim spiritual kinship with Abraham Lincoln if he is too proud to fight.

Fifty-odd years ago there were men in this country who were too proud to fight, but they were not found in this club, and they did not vote for Abraham Lincoln. Fifty-odd years ago there were men in the nation that were too proud to fight—that is, to fight a foreign foe. I won't say a "foreign foe." That was a wrong statement of what occurred. "Too proud to fight" the foe of the nation, but they were perfectly willing to fight the police in the draft riots. And now, in the greatest crisis that this country, that the world, has seen—that we have seen since the civil war—in the greatest crisis for the world as a whole—that the world has seen since the Napoleonic wars—it is our duty and privilege to stand once more for the principles for which the men of the early '60s, who founded this club, stood; to stand for peace, honestly and sincerely by every honorable expedient, but to stand for it in that effective way which means that the man standing for it asks it as a right, in the spirit of justice, and does not cringe for it as a favor to be granted contemptuously by a wrongdoer.

If, after the Gettysburg speech, Abraham Lincoln had appointed a conference of the type now sitting in New London we would not think of the Gettysburg speech except with bitterness or laughter. If, after the second inaugural, Abraham Lincoln had sanctioned the retention of slavery in any form in this nation we should hang our heads whenever we thought of that inaugural or of Abraham Lincoln himself. We have a right now to ask the men of this country to decide in the spirit of the men who, in 1864, returned Abraham Lincoln to the Presidency.

One of Lincoln's then suporters, James Russell Lowell, the poet, spoke of a certain shifty politician of those days, or rather wrote of him as follows:

> His greatness less in genius lies
> Than in the power as occasions rise
> Lifelong convictions to extemporize.

The breed is not dead.

Mr. Wilson's speech last Saturday was an invitation to foreign powers to do whatever they wished, because if he were in power they need not be afraid. Another thing: In Mr. Lincoln's speech of acceptance—I think it was in that place that he so happily named Shadow Lawn—

Mr. Root—You said "Mr. Lincoln's speech"; you meant Mr. Wilson's speech.

Mr. Roosevelt—Good heavens! That was a verbal inaccuracy with a vengeance. In Mr. Wilson's speech of acceptance two or three—a few weeks ago, whenever it was—there was one sentence among many of which I took note, in which he said, "that if all essential rights were invaded by any nation they must be met by prompt challenge and resistance."

Weasel Words Again.

Now! Take the sentence about keeping us out of war at all costs last Saturday, and these sentences about prompt challenge and resistance, together, and one group of sentences is the "weasel" and the other, the "egg." It is open to Mr. Wilson which is the weasel and which the egg. But one of them sucks all the meaning out of the other. If the speech last Saturday expressed his real convictions, then by "prompt challenge and resistance" he means tapping his adversary on the wrist.

And if you can once persuade an adversary that that is all that he has to fear, he grows bold. As Mr. Hughes has pointed out this evening in what, Mr. Hughes, I can truthfully call your noble speech—it was a great speech—Mr. Wilson is praised for the most part by people with shoulders that slope like a champagne bottle, by people with timid hearts and quivering voices who say that he has kept us out of war. Kept us out of war? He has put us in three little wars that I can name. War—now, I am not a lawyer; I think the lawyers among you know that—but I believe that Attell, in "The Law of Nations," defines war as the enforcement of opinions or rights by force of arms.

We are assured officially that we have kept peace with Mexico. During the last three and a half years more Americans have been killed by Mexicans than were killed by Spaniards in the entire Spanish War. Now, if any one cares to say we have been waging peace instead of war, he is welcome to whatever comfort he can obtain from the misuse of nomenclature.

We can be certain that with Mr. Hughes as President, in the first place, our people will be protected in their lives, in foreign lands, or on the high seas—that is the primary duty; that is the first duty—and in the next place that our people will be protected in their property in foreign lands or on the high seas—a secondary duty, but an important duty also. And in the next place we can rest assured that if Mr. Hughes is President the Executive of the nation will be terrorized by no one, whether from abroad or at home. [Laughter and applause.]

Nothing more ominous to the future of America has ever been seen than the passing of this miscalled "eight-hour law," which was merely a law to raise wages; than the passing of that law with the legislators looking not to the President, but to the great labor leaders, who sat, watch in hand, to see the law enacted.

Incidentally I want to say that if Mr. Wilson really believed that the principle of an eight-hour law was so sacred that you could not arbitrate it, why doesn't he begin with his chambermaid and butler? I speak quite seriously. If it is a sacred thing, not to be discussed in terms of common sense, then let him say that the housemaid does not come on duty until 8 and goes off at 4 and that any day there is a dinner and the butler has to stay up until 10 or 11, he does not appear at either breakfast or lunch. [Laughter.]

Now, gentlemen, that is not a catch matter of which I am speaking. If what he says is true, as a universal and sacred truth, then let him apply it in his own household first.

I was particularly pleased to hear what Mr. Hughes said about the need of discipline in this nation, discipline in peace and discipline in the tasks and discipline to prepare us for the tasks of war. You know my opinion. You know that I do not believe that any man is fit to be a free man who isn't willing and eager and ready when the call of the country comes to do whatever service is demanded of him in war or in peace.

And I not only stand for preparedness in the shape of a big, first-class, professional navy, and a small, first-class professional army, but I stand for universal military training of every young man in the nation.

And I would not let any immigrant who comes here vote until he had had that training under the flag, so that he should know to which flag it was that he owed full loyalty.

I believe in labor unions—I am an honorary member of one myself—but I believe first of all in the great Union to which all of us belong, the Union of the United States of America.

Well, I have not been able to profit by the good example of quality, I have copied the other example of quantity in your speech, Mr. Hughes.

TAFT LIKENS 1916 TO 1896.

Says This Is the Most Important Election Since Civil War.

In his address at the Union League Club last night, Mr. Taft said in part:

I concur in the view of Mr. Roosevelt that this election is the most important election that we have had in this country since the war. It likens itself in some ways to the campaign of 1896, in that in '96 the question was whether we should preserve the honor and integrity of the country and not reduce our debts by legislation 50 per cent.; but this is even more important than that, in the fact that our adversaries in this election rely on the confidence that the American people have become so steeped in comfort and luxury and the unwillingness to make sacrifices that, by an appeal to that people that we have not been put into war—when it was not necessary for us to go to war at any rate—and that we have now great temporary prosperity—the people should not be fooled into understanding what are the real issues before them and how momentous those issues are.

Now we have been kept out of war. Have we been? Is the treatment that we have given to Mexico one that assures us peace? Had we allowed Mexico to work out her own salvation, as we have been told in the Indianapolis speech we ought to do, then we should not be responsible, as we are now, for the conditions that prevail in Mexico. And therefore when this war is over the policy we have pursued in Mexico is going to follow us, and we may have to answer for our intermeddling, our desire to punish one person, and to say to the Mexicans whom they may have to rule over them and whom they may not have. I do not consider that keeping us out of war.

Now, I am not going to detain you any longer. We are here to welcome the next President of the United States. And I may say incidentally also we are holding one of those exceptional meetings of the ex-Presidents' club. It is not a large membership. And the members do not always, or perhaps ever, entertain completely harmonious views.

But there is one subject upon which we are unanimous to a point that I can't exaggerate, and that is that we are going to elect in November another member of that club.

HUGHES REPEATS ATTACKS.

Urges Americanism, Assails Our Course Toward Mexico.

In his address Mr. Hughes went over much of the ground he has covered in his campaign addresses. He made this statement, which was taken as an answer to assertions made by President Wilson in his address on Saturday:

"We have heard in recent days that the alternative of the policy of the present Administration is war. I think the alternative of the policy of the present Administration is peace with honor.

"I am a man devoted to the pursuits of peace. We cherish the ideals of peace. We entertain no thought of aggression, we are not covetous, we are not exploiters, but we are Americans, and American rights must be maintained throughout the world. That is the cornerstone of our security; that is the essential basis of our peace. We are not, as I have said, truculent; we are not courting struggle, but I do say with all seriousness that we have been living in a period of national humiliation.

"Our citizens have been murdered, their property destroyed, and our commerce interrupted. The alternative of a weak and vacillating policy is not war; it is a firm insistence upon known rights in a world where all nations desire our friendship, and we desire the friendship of all, and where only the most inexcusable blundering could drag us into strife."

He repeated his charge that the Administration had not done all that it should to advance American commerce abroad.

"When men who are found in a neighboring country engaged in lawful pursuits ask for American protection the inquiry is made of them whether they did not go beyond the borders of this nation in order to make money. If there are any who have forfeited their rights under international law let them be singled out. If this nation desires to promote American enterprise it must be known of all that American rights with respect to lives, property, and commerce will be safeguarded in every part of the world."

THE NEW
Far East Department
Presents Fabrics from the Looms of the Orient
Amidst the splendid assemblage of Eastern treasures and Eastern products in this new and fascinating department is a collection of
of marvelous beauty, some woven on hand looms, others made in the factories of the Island Empire and China,—representing a picturesque phase of Chinese and Japanese art.
Beauty is the heritage of the Oriental,—he is whimsical, religious, naturalistic, poetical and philosophic, and it is this harmony of thought that he weaves into cloth in a perfect poetry of color and design. He weaves his dreams and his visions, and without sacrilege he portrays in the language of symbolism his conception of things infinite and unearthly.
In colorings that defy reproduction are fabrics for panels and scarfs such as are used for the obies or girdles of the Japanese women,—printed silks and cottons, silk brocades, metallic brocades, hand-woven brocades and wonderful combinations of all these. The colors are such as only the Oriental mind can conceive and produce, the reds and golds of the sunset, the blues and greens of the sea, the blues and silvers of the night. The designs embrace flowers, birds, butterflies, pines, pond lilies, dragons, pagodas, old mosaic patterns and intricate, conventionalized motifs.
From cloths as dull, weird and mysterious as the night to those as brilliant and dazzling as sunrise the prices range from $1.49 yd. to $24.49 yd.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York and the Assistant United States Treasurer at New York also make their exchanges at the Clearing House. The Clearing House Collection Department also exchanges at the Clearing House, making sixty-three clearing institutions. There are twenty-one banks and trust companies in the city and vicinity, not members of the association, which make their exchanges through banks that are members, in accordance with constitutional provisions.

The work of the Clearing House has grown rapidly in late years. In 1854 there were fifty members, and the daily cash balances amounted to $988,000. By 1863 they amounted to $2,207,000, and in 1865 to $3,373,000. They passed the 4,000,000-mark in 1872, and the 5,000,000-mark in 1881. They amounted to $6,083,000 in 1892, after which they fell off for two years, crossing the 6,000,000-mark again in 1895. For the last ten years they have increased as follows:

1916	8,561,624,447	28,163,238

Clearings have shown a similar gain. The average daily clearings in 1854 were $19,104,000; in 1869, a record year, $121,451,000, this total not being seen again until 1880. They fluctuated widely, dropping to $70,000,000 in 1876, to $82,000,000 in 1885, and to $79,000,000 in 1894. For the last ten years they have run as follows:

in the fight charges the other with "conspiracy in restraint of trade" in violation of the anti-trust laws, and the Attorney General will push the investigation.

Farmers Hold Their Ground.

From Boonville, Oneida County, and numerous other points in New York and New Jersey the Dairymen's League received letters from agents stating that only 10 per cent. or less of the normal supply of milk was being shipped to this city and that the farmers were prepared for a long fight.

Reports from correspondents of THE NEW YORK TIMES in the counties from which New York City ordinarily obtains a great proportion of its milk supply indicated that last night's shipments, for this morning's distribution here, were smaller even than Monday's. It was reported that Putnam County, which normally sends 40,000 quarts, sent none at all last night, with the exception of a small quantity that one large distributing company of this city had held over in its plant there since last Saturday; that Oswego County sent a reduced quantity and will be sending only 10 per cent. of its normal output by the end of the week. Only 800 quarts were sent from Onondaga County, and the farmers there are having their milk made into butter and cheese and are prepared for a prolonged fight. There were reports that milk was again dumped in the road by "strikers" near Binghamton, Cortland, and Marathon, Broome County.

In New Jersey the grip of the Dairymen's League was also tightened and further curtailment of shipments was reported. At Newton, N. J., it was said that the league ranks were rapidly filling. Several farmers' wagons were emptied of milk by pickets, including a wagon driven by the owner's wife and guarded in the rear by the farmer himself armed with a pike. The Sheriff of Sussex County came upon a group of the pickets and at Lafayette made a speech but no arrests. He is a member of the league himself, and contented himself with warning the pickets to avoid violence

Many Cans Only Half Filled.

At the railroad yards in this city it was reported yesterday that in some cases milk trains had come in practically empty; in others less than half filled. At the 132d Street and Lincoln Avenue yards of the New Haven three milk trains arrived, bringing between them only six cans of milk. An express shipment of 450 cans was received from Boston, however. At the receiving platforms at Eleventh Avenue and Forty-eighth Street practically no milk was received, but at the yard at Sixtieth Street and Eleventh Avenue it was said that twenty out of the forty normal cars arrived.

Estimates as to the amount of milk New York City will receive today varied last night, the Dairymen's League officials asserting it would be only about 20 per cent. of normal. The "Big Three," distributing companies, Sheffield Farms, Borden's, and the Mutual-McDermott, predicted that they would have 70, 65, and 80 per cent., respectively, for today's distribution, and said that babies, invalids, and hospitals would be supplied first, as on previous days, and that their supply would be adequate.

The suburban towns felt the shortage more keenly than Manhattan yesterday, residents of Long Island and other nearby villages being in many cases left without milk at all or with materially decreased supplies. About 1,000 families in White Plains and vicinity, it was reported, were able to get no milk during the day.

NIGHT RIDERS POUR OUT MILK.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Oct. 3.—Hundreds of cans of milk cooling in spring houses of producers not members of the Dairymen's League in the Amenia and Shekomeko sections of Dutchess County were dumped early this morning by bands of night riders composed of members of the league.

In these sections of the county the league has fewer members than elsewhere in the county, and members from the other districts made the raids, the authorities assert, to intimidate the independent producers.

Another outbreak occurred at Amenia, where more than a hundred dairymen and their helpers attacked the dairy of Northrup Fowler, an independent producer, but were driven off by Deputy Sheriffs. To quell any further disturbances, Sheriff Conklin has sworn in forty more special Deputies. Several wagons were held up and the drivers given milk baths. The ten dairymen charged with holding up and beating Irving P. Waite of Wingdale on Monday morning were held today in $1,000 bail each for the Grand Jury.

Jacob S. Brill, President of the Dairymen's League, said tonight less than twenty cans of milk were shipped from Dutchess County to New York today. Sheriff Conklin announced tonight that adequate protection would be afforded tomorrow to all independent producers.

One hundred league members near Wingdale have brought suit against the Borden Condensed Milk Company for the return of 1,200 cans they alleged the company had failed to return.

MME. MATTFELD RETURNS.

Metropolitan Opera Singer Says Theatres in Germany Are Crowded.

Mme. Marie Mattfeld of the Metropolitan Opera Company arrived here yesterday on the Hellig Olaf from Copenhagen, after spending two months this Summer in Germany. One of her reasons for going abroad was to convey to the American Red Cross in Munich money which she had collected as a result of concerts she gave for the war relief work.

Mme. Mattfeld, who avoided reference to political matters, said that as far as theatrical and musical conditions were concerned things were normal in Germany. She said theatres and opera houses were crowded, the moving picture houses being the only ones to suffer from the war through a difficulty in obtaining films. She said artistic Germany had shut itself out persistently from considerations of war matters as far as possible.

FOOD HERE TO REACH NEW HEIGHTS SOON

Flour, Butter, Cheese, Meats, and Other Commodities Share in General Advance.

PRICE OF POTATOES DOUBLES

Flour at $10 a Barrel Expected by Dealers—Storage Stocks Are Small.

Prices of foods will reach new high levels in New York this Winter, according to information obtained from dealers yesterday. The recent advances in the prices of milk and flour are to be followed by rises in other foodstuffs. Eggs have advanced 2 cents a dozen within the last few days; some vegetables have made a jump upward, and butter, influenced by the record price, for this time of year, in Chicago yesterday, is expected to make a gain of not less than 5 cents a pound in this market.

Already there is a wide margin between the prices of most kinds of food now and at this time last year. Vegetables, it was estimated by a dealer, are 25 per cent. higher than at this time in 1915. Fish is 10 per cent. higher, and meat has gone up from 2 to 4 cents a pound wholesale, according to the kind.

Chickens which were selling in this market at 21 cents a pound last October are now quoted at 27 to 28 cents; fowls have climbed from 18 to 23 cents, and ducks from 18 to 22½ cents. Eggs are 5 cents a dozen higher than a year ago, according to a report from Washington sent out by the Department of Agriculture yesterday. Potatoes, this report said, are 115 per cent. higher than a year ago, and cheese 23 per cent. higher, while flour is higher than at any time since the civil war.

William Hahn, butter and eggs: "Eggs are likely to go to 50 or 60 cents a dozen this Winter. The price of the best is now 45 cents. Last Winter, I think, the highest price was 45 cents. Neither butter nor eggs have been put in cold storage as they were last year. Cheese, at 21½ to 22 cents a pound, is higher than it has been since I have been in business here, forty-seven years."

E. Joseph, meat and poultry: "Meats are easier than they were a week ago, though the prices as compared with those of a year ago show decided advances. Changes in prices, wholesale, since last year are: Beef, hinds and ribs, 1915, 16½ cents a pound; 1916, 18½. Pork, 1915, 17 cents; 1916, 21; smoked hams, 1915, 16 cents; 1916, 19½."

R. N. Eldredge, fish: "There has been no change in the price of fish in the last week. Prices are about 10 per cent. higher than they were a year ago."

Max H. Steiermann, bread: "Flour for which I was paying $5.75 a barrel in 1,000-barrel lots last June is now $8.75, and everybody is crying $10 flour. Even if the present price of flour is maintained I do not see anything ahead but a general advance in the price of bread."

SLAVERY EVIDENCE STOLEN.

Burglars Invade Home of Assistant District Attorney Smith.

Important evidence in the white slave investigation was destroyed by thieves believed to have been hired by members of the so-called Vice Trust, who broke into the home of Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith, at 153 West 103d Street, on Monday night, it was learned yesterday. Although the police were notified as soon as the robbery was discovered no arrests have been made.

According to Mr. Smith he had taken to his home for study five affidavits and fifteen statements of witnesses against David Siberia, Samuel Kirsch, alyias Sam the Peddler, and Max Axelrod, all under indictment for white slavery.

"When I left my office I noticed several men loitering in the hall who watched me intently," said Mr. Smith. "They followed me out of the building, but I did not think it strange at the time."

Mr. Smith said he remained up until 1 o'clock, then retired, leaving the papers on his desk in his study. He believed the robbery took place about an hour later. The thieves forced open the door of the house. The desk and bookcases were ransacked and the room upset generally.

The affidavits were stolen, but the fifteen statements were torn into bits and scattered on the floor. The thieves also entered Mr. Smith's bedroom, which adjoined the study, and stole his watch and a sum of money, the exact amount of which he did not know. Some money was also stolen from the room of his young son.

Mr. Smith said that in 1914, when he was conducting a similar investigation, his house was robbed and evidence against Mortsche Goldberg, then known as "king of the white slavers," was taken.

Nijinsky Sprains His Ankle.

Warslav Nijinsky, principal dancer and artistic director of the Diaghileff Ballet Russe, fell during a rehearsal of the organization at the Manhattan Opera House yesterday and sprained his left ankle. He was demonstrating one of the ballet evolutions when he slipped and fell on the stage. Dr. Julian Gehrung of 15 East Forty-eighth Street was called, and, after treatment, the dancer accompanied him to the home of Dr. Robert Abbe of 13 West Fiftieth Street. There a thorough examination was made, after which the dancer was taken to his rooms at the Biltmore. It was said last night the injury was not serious and the dancer would be able to continue work in a day or two and would not be prevented from taking part in the first performance of the ballet, which occurs at the Manhattan Opera House on Monday evening.

R. R. Bowes, Banker, Drops Dead.

Richard R. Bowes, Vice President of the Hoboken Bank for Savings in Hoboken, N. J., dropped dead yesterday from heart disease in Fifth Street, half a block from his home at 208. With him at the time were his three brothers, Thomas, William, and James, who removed his body to his home. Mr. Bowes was formerly for thirty-two years Collector of Revenue in Hoboken, and was said to be wealthy. Before becoming Vice President of the bank, three years ago, he was for many years one of its managers. Mr. Bowes was unmarried.

OLD M. F. PLANT HOME LEASED TO JEWELER

W. K. Vanderbilt Buys the Property at 5th Av. and 52d St. and Rents It to Cartier.

PRICE PUT AT $1,000,000

Trade Will Now Invade the Block Long Restricted by the Vanderbilts.

William K. Vanderbilt has bought the former house of Morton F. Plant, on the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Fifty-second Street, and has leased it to Cartier, one of the prominent Fifth Avenue jewelers. In adapting the house for business no change in the exterior of the building is contemplated.

Considerable surprise was expressed in realty and trade interests in that part of the city at the contemplated abandonment of one of the finest Fifth Avenue residences, directly opposite the twin Vanderbilt houses, for trade. It was pointed out that the change might affect materially the use of the other two similar residences just below, one of which, at 647 Fifth Avenue, is owned by W. K. Vanderbilt and the other is occupied by W. B. Osgood Field. The latter's home adjoins the Union Club, covering a large plot on the Fifty-first Street corner.

The leasing of the former Plant home for business marks the first trade invasion in the Fifth Avenue block between Fifty-first and Fifty-second Streets, which in view of the Vanderbilt holdings and the restrictions, has been generally regarded as effectually closed to trade encroachments. Another interesting feature is that Mr. Vanderbilt controlled the restrictive clause on the Fifty-second Street corner property. He was, therefore, the only man who could open it to business. The adjoining house has been under lease to Robert Goelet. Mr. Vanderbilt's home is diagonally opposite, on the northwest corner. Directly opposite is the northerly twin Vanderbilt house owned by Mrs. W. D. Sloane, and the southerly of the twin houses has been extensively altered by Cornelius Vanderbilt at an expense of over $500,000, as his permanent city home. He got possession of it at the death of George Vanderbilt, who held it during his lifetime under the will of W. H. Vanderbilt.

Commodore Morton F. Plant purchased last season a plot on the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Eighty-sixth Street for his new home, and it is nearing completion. He admitted that he was driven out of the old home centre to the uptown section on acount of the ever increasing trade encroachments. His former house is a magnificent five-story white marble and granite structure erected about ten years ago. It has a frontage of 50 feet on the avenue by 100 feet on the street, and is assessed at $925,000, of which $800,000 is land value. Mr. Vanderbilt paid close to $1,000,000 for the property, and his lease to the jeweler, it is understood, will represent about 5 per cent. on a valuation of $1,000,000, which will be $50,000 a year, one of the highest rentals on the avenue for business uses.

Clifford Van Schurman, who has acted for Morton F. Plant in some of his realty dealings, and who sold to him the uptown Fifth Avenue plot, declined yesterday either to affirm or deny Mr. Vanderbilt's purchase or the lease to the Fifth Avenue jeweler. Cartier's jewelry store is at 712 Fifth Avenue, adjoining the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, but he expects to move to his new place before the end of the year.

BAN ON SACRIFICIAL FOWLS.

Orthodox Jews Want Ruling of Health Commissioner Removed.

Health Commissioner Haven Emerson has put a stop to the ancient custom, followed by orthodox Jews in all parts of the world, of sacrificing a live fowl on the Day of Atonement, which commences at sundown on Friday and continues until the same hour on the following day. Chief Rabbi Jaffee of 205 East Broadway has enlisted the services of former Secretary of State Samuel S. Koenig to head a deputation of rabbis and prominent east side Jews to call on Mayor Mitchel today and ask for the restriction to be removed until the Jewish celebrations are over.

The custom has been observed by orthodox Jews in all parts of the world for centuries. Each member of the family goes to the market on Thursday afternoon and purchases a live fowl, which is kept in the house overnight and used as a sacrifice on the following day.

Lectures on Social Work Begin.

Robert W. de Forest yesterday opened the New York School of Philanthropy's free course of noonday lectures upon social work with a talk on the activities of the Charity Organization Society. These lectures will be held on Tuesdays throughout the year in the assembly hall at 105 East Twenty-second Street, and are open to the public. It was announced that sixty-five persons—forty-seven women and eighteen men—had enrolled themselves as regular students of the school.

Honor Chamber of Commerce Dead.

A special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce will be held at noon tomorrow to commemorate three officers of the Chamber who have died recently. President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University will speak of the life and work of Seth Low. William A. Prendergast, Controller of the city, will speak in honor of James G. Cannon, and R. Fulton Cutting will speak in honor of James Talcott.

FEDERAL INSPECTION OF PARALYSIS ENDS

Government Physicians Convinced Epidemic Has Run Its Course.

FEW NEW CASES REPORTED

Sick Children's Transfer Society to Take Case of Convalescing Cripples.

Federal inspection of interstate travel originating in New York City, which was started last July at the height of the poliomyelitis epidemic, was discontinued yesterday, the United States Health authorities being convinced that the epidemic here was over. Dr. Charles E. Banks, in charge of the work of inspection in New York, made the announcement after he had received instructions from Surgeon General Blue in Washington.

Yesterday's new cases of infantile paralysis numbered twelve, and eight deaths due to the disease were reported. There were 4 cases in Manhattan, 2 in Brooklyn, 2 in Queens, 3 in the Bronx, and 1 in Richmond. The total number of cases is now 9,063, and there have been 2,308 deaths.

The Health Department has now $42,030.13 for its fund for braces. The day's receipts yesterday were $465.48. The contributors were "H. F. W.," $200; Dr. Cornelius Tyson, $135; Lewis L. Delafield, for Edgar Palmer, $79.23; Frederick de Sola, $15; Bessie R. Frank and anonymous, $10; The Globe, $8; Mrs. L. Bry, $5.25, and Helen Hardy, $3.

Readers of THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday contributed $110.10 to the fund to buy toys and braces for the cripples. The contributors were: Proceeds of the children's circus at Altamont, $10.10, and St. Mary's Chapel, Falmouth, Foreside, Me., $100.

A committee of one hundred, known as the Sick Children's Transfer Society, has been organized to help children convalescing from poliomyelitis whose parents cannot afford scientific medical after care to prevent the patients from becoming permanent cripples. The society, whose offices are at 35 Nassau Street, has issued an appeal to obtain motor buses to carry the children between their homes and hospitals.

Twenty-eight new cases of infantile paralysis were reported in New Jersey yesterday, as follows:

ANDERSON CASE ON TRIAL.

Doctors Testify at Habeas Corpus Hearing That Child Has Paralysis.

The hearing in the habeas corpus proceedings brought by Mr. and Mrs. Anton Anderson of 180 New York Avenue, Jamaica, to compel the Department of Health to return their 19-month-old son, Robert, who is a patient in the Queens Borough Hospital, was begun yesterday before Justice Garretson in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn. The parents, through their attorney, Lawrence T. Gresser, complained that their son was taken from them by force and through trespass on their premises. The department physicians contend that the child had infantile paralysis, but the parents deny it. The child was not brought to court.

Assistant Corporation Counsel William F. Kennedy, representing the Department of Health, declared that the child had been removed because Mrs. Anderson violated quarantine regulations by permitting her son to play with other children.

Dr. Stephen H. Ackerman and Dr. J. R. Graham, diagnosticians of the Health Department, and Dr. Charles T. Sharp, in charge at the Queens Borough Hospital, declared Robert had poliomyelitis.

Justice Garretson adjourned the hearing until tomorrow, when, it is expected, Mrs. Anderson will produce physicians to testify that the child was not suffering from infantile paralysis.

SUGGESTS REVISION OF MEXICO MINE TAX

LEVIES BASED ON PROFITS

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 3.—The committee, headed by William Loeb, Jr., representing American mining interests in Mexico, met the Mexican Commissioners today and urged on them the necessity for modifying the Carranza taxation decrees if mining was to be resumed on a large scale.

The committee outlined a system of taxation, which it regarded as the heaviest that could be imposed on Mexican mines without forcing the abandonment of properties. This system provided the lighter taxes for low-grade properties and the heavier taxes for richer mines. The present orders of Carranza tax one type of mine just as heavily as another.

The Mexican Commissioners have protested that this discrimination was difficult without a costly system of checking by the Government and that some of the Carranza decrees had been misconstrued and were less harsh than they appeared.

One of the American Commissioners said that the Mexican conferees, after receiving advice from the mining interests on taxation, resolved to continue to work for a system of taxation suitable to the Mexicans.

Disposed to Co-operate.

The statement issued by the joint commission today was as follows:

"The American Commissioners held a second conference with the representatives of the American mining interests this afternoon. It is a source of gratification to find the companies apparently disposed to co-operate in bringing about improved conditions in Mexico, particularly in promoting the resumption of normal industrial activity. They have expressed their willingness to co-operate with the Mexican Government in providing improved conditions of transportation and in resuming operation of certain properties if protection of life and property can be provided and a workable system of taxes and mining regulations can be agreed upon.

"The representatives of the mining industries have been in conference with Mr. Cabrera, the Secretary of Finance, and Mr. Pani, Director General of National Railways, discussing fully and frankly these matters of mutual interest. Many questions of detail are under discussion, as, for example, the restoration of the roadbeds of the railways, provision for adequate rolling stock and equipment, &c. If satisfactory agreements can be reached with reference to these matters, especially the resumption of mining activities, improved conditions in Mexico can be confidently expected.

"Such resumption would be distinctly beneficial in furnishing employment to the great mass of unemployed Mexican labor, and would also be a source of immediate revenue to the Mexican Government. The necessary prerequisite to such a plan would be the return to Mexico of American mining operators who have withdrawn during the recent disturbances. The Government of the United States cannot encourage such return until satisfactory assurances are given with reference to the safety of life and property in the district in which operations are to be resumed."

55,000 Idle Mexicans.

The statistics of the committee for the forty-five mining companies which they represent show that loss of life and destruction of property have caused such suspension of mining as to reduce the number of Mexicans employed by 55,000.

An assurance of the safety of their American employes in the mining districts is not considered one of the prerequisites for the withdrawal of the Mexican troops and the organization of the new border control. Mr. Lane was asked if the withdrawal of the border troops was contingent on the capture of Villa or the dispersal of his troops. He said that it was not.

Mr. Loeb, Judge D. J. Haff, Henry Breere, and other members of the Mining Committee were received with great cordiality by the Mexican Commissioners, but it was suggested to them that it would be better if they would not stay at the Hotel Traymore, where the commission is meeting, in order to forestall an attempt by the cientificos to charge that the Mexican Commissioners were in too close contact with the Guggenheims and other mining interests.

Mr. Lane, who said last week that he hoped the commission would bring its labors to a successful conclusion within two weeks, said today that he feared he would have to cancel his projected stumping tour to the Pacific Coast in behalf of President Wilson. Asked if he thought the commission would continue in session until after election, he said that he hoped not, but would not venture a prediction.

Both Mr. Lane and members of the Mexican section denied today that the plan of border patrol suggesetd by the Mexicans provided that the American forces should have charge of parts of the border near American railroad lines and the Mexicans the intervening spaces. Mr. Lane also denied reports that the Mexican Commissioners had received instructions from Carranza to press for an immediate withdrawal of the American troops and to break off negotiations if such a settlement were not forthcoming.

ATTACKS CARRANZA REGIME.

Paris Temps Says Anarchy Endangers French Investments.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—The Temps today devotes a leader to what it terms "Mexican anarchy in placing in danger French investments of $600,000,000 by the argitrary acts of the Carranza Government," especially by the decree of Sept. 5, under which it is alleged properties are confiscated.

The Temps says events justify serious fears for the future. It adds that President Wilson himself has had painful surprises, and alludes to the "futility" of the Atlantic City conference and to the responsibility assumed by the United States in asking France to adapt its policies toward Mexico which arbitrarily annuls legal contracts. The leader continues:

"France still refuses to admit that its demands will remain without result; but if that should be the case she will take such action as the situation requires, and will not forget this disappointment."

HUMAN TISSUE CAN LIVE ON FOREVER

CULTURE MEDIUM MODIFIED

By Using Fowl or Pigeon Plasma Added to Human Serum Growth Can Be Maintained Indefinitely.

Dr. Robert A. Lambert, working in the pathological laboratory of the Presbyterian Hospital in this city, has so improved the method of cultivating human tissue after its removal from the body, by modifying the culture medium, that it will grow and multiply indefinitely. In other words, human tissue would live forever if properly attended. Whether or not the experiments are likely to have any value in the direction of conserving human life the investigator refrains from stating.

The physician reports the results of his experiments briefly in an article entitled "Technique of Cultivating Human Tissues in Vitro" (in glass jars), which appears in the current issue of the Journal of Experimental Medicine, published by the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research. He refers to the earlier experiments in tissue cultivation carried on by Dr. Alexis Carrel, Dr. M. T. Burrows, himself and others, the majority of which have been described in THE TIMES.

These earlier experiments were not as successful as could be desired, Dr. Lambert points out, owing to the difficulty in hitting upon the right culture medium. In nearly every case the fibrin in the blood plasma which was used as a medium would liquefy, and when the new cells wandered out from the tissue they would not find any framework upon which to build. Consequently, the tissue would die.

Two experimenters, Dr. J. R. Losee and Dr. A. H. Ebeling, added a liquid called Ringer's solution, and, also, taking a hint from Dr. Carrel, added some tissue extracts to the plasma. This mixture delayed the digestion of the fibrin in the plasma, and, by making transfers of human tissue to fresh plasma every day or two, they were able in one case to propagate it as long as sixty days. They emphasized the shortcomings of their technique, however, and stated that they experienced many failures, which they attributed to the early liquefaction of the culture medium. It is this drawback that Dr. Lambert has overcome. Here is part of his report:

"It may be noted that it is not the ability of human tissue to digest fibrin, but rather the susceptibility of human fibrin to digestion which is the basis of the trouble, for we found that human tissue did not liquefy the fibrin of foreign plasmas, while it was observed that human fibrin was readily digested by the ferments of practically every foreign tissue.

"It was noted that fowl and pigeon plasma were never liquefied except in the presence of particular types of bacteria. Since earlier experiments had shown that tissues from certain of the lower animals could be cultivated in plasma from foreign species, it occurred to us that this property of fowl and pigeon plasma to resist digestion might be utilized in growing human tissues.

"It seemed possible that chick fibrin might be made to serve as the framework of the culture medium with human serum or plasma added to supply the necessary nutritive substances. A medium was therefore prepared by mixing a small quantity of chick plasma with a considerably larger quantity of human serum. Various human tissues (lymph gland, spleen, skin, &c.) obtained at operation were put up in this mixed medium. No liquefaction was observed, and active progressive growth was seen in the majority of the preparations where soft friable tissue was used.

These are two of Dr. Lambert's conclusions:

"1. Unmodified human plasma is not a satisfactory culture medium for human tissues owing to the susceptibility of human fibrin to digestion by tissue ferments. The necessary framework is thus destroyed before the cells begin to migrate. The difficulty can be overcome by adding to human plasma or serum a small quantity of fowl or pigeon plasma, the fibrin of which is highly resistant to digestion. Human tissues have been propagated in this medium for several months through subcultures, and growth in vitro can probably be maintained indefinitely.

"2. Human tissues show no greater sensitiveness to changes in temperature and mechanical injury associated with preparation of cultures than those of lower animals. They may be preserved in an ordinary icebox at 10 to 15 degrees Centigrade as long as six or eight days. Tissues obtained at operation give best results, but pieces of organs removed at autopsy one to four hours after death sometimes show active growth."

It is these qualities that make Fatimas truly sensible.

That means that we handle four quarts of milk to earn one cent. It means that your milk came to you backed by the most intensive service devoted to any food product, and at a profit that in any other line would be considered commercially unsafe.

We render a service to the consumer that the consumer wants and demands. We render that service at a cost that is economically low for the reason that our organization and resources have made it possible to operate efficiently.

No plan of milk distribution yet offered has been able to supersede our present efficient methods. No plan of milk distribution can succeed without the personal service that now goes with each quart of Borden's milk.

Our duty to the consumer is as clear to us as is our duty to the producer. We have tried to protect the one and at the same time made a stable market for the product of the other.

The recent advances in the cost of every factor entering into the distribution and handling of milk, which are beyond our control, obviously make the maintenance of the present schedule of retail prices impossible if the same standards of quality and service are to be preserved.

"Under Sentence," which was presented to New York for the first time last evening at the Harris Theatre, is a crowded and curious play that is the work—the first joint work—of Roi Cooper Megrue, successful dramatist, and Irvin Shrewsbury Cobb, after-dinner speaker, humorist and short story writer extraordinary. Between them they have written a piece that deals with frenzied finance and the prison system. What elements each contributed to the compound, it is impossible for the outsider to determine, but the play falls, nevertheless, into two quite diverse parts.

The first is a bald, unvarnished and continuously interesting melodrama; the second, which begins with the third act shortly after 10 o'clock, is a lively treatment of prison reform that borders on extravaganza. This achieves for this story of crime and punishment and torture an ending that is more than merely happy. It is positively jovial. It is as though a play by the late Charles Klein, written in the mood of "The Gamblers" and "The Money Makers" had been finished by the late W. S. Gilbert. Indeed, if "Under Sentence" had been presented anonymously, you would have sworn they had written it, not Roi Megrue and Irvin Cobb.

If the new piece at the Harris has a long and prosperous career it will be valuable as a reminder to the casual citizen that, for all the hubbub about prison reform, that gospel has not yet spread far. It may serve to keep in mind that as yet pitifully little light has filtered into the damp and musty mediaeval strongholds to which convicts are committed in the interests of justice. Of "Justice" it will also remind us. Here is at least a kindred protest. Here are the same cells, the same cowed prisoners, the same sympathy. Yet there is all the difference in the world.

There is a difference, to be sure, in the quality of the workmanship, but the immeasurable difference in effect is traceable rather to the difference in purpose and approach. Do you remember how the complete untheatricalism of Galsworthy gave his play the accent of truth, so that its burning realism fairly branded you with its meaning? This accent is utterly lacking from "Under Sentence" because the play is theatrical through and through. There is one scene where a group of bankers are gathered around a library table with George Nash as the commanding figure. In order to make him such, he is supplied with two high cushions to exalt him, and under the edge of the table there is a row of concealed incandescents to light up his countenance. Now this is a trick of stage management, and an old-fashioned one at that, but it is symptomatic of the entire endeavor. So much for "Justice" and "Under Sentence."

The first two acts of "Under Sentence" include all the chapters on frenzied finance. The little acorn from which this great oak grew was a short story by Cobb, his first. The play began as a dramatization of "The Escape of Mr. Trimm," which Cobb was inspired to write in the days when he was a reporter covering the trial of Charles W. Morse. It began with that, but nearly all traces of the original idea have been buried in the new ideas. Here we have in John W. Blake an utterly unscrupulous Wall Street giant who sends to jail an innocent little scapegoat.

The scapegoat's wife, played effectively by Janet Beecher, (who is always so useful when our producers must cast the rôle of a woman of character, resolution, and breeding,) dedicates herself to the ruin of Blake, and finally has the satisfaction of landing him behind the bars. From one incident you may see what manner of man is John W. Blake. When he needs a second scapegoat he calmly assigns one of his co-directors to the rôle, dismisses him from the meeting, and, in the hearing of all, directs his servant to provide him with a revolver and show him to a room where he may kill himself. From this incident you may also see what manner of play is "Under Sentence."

In what follows—the passing of the very prison system into Blake's control—there is the suggestion that there is no keeping a bad man down, or rather that stone walls do not a prison make for brains. This, apparently, is the authors' theory, though it does seem as if Blake's money, whereby he was enabled to elect his own candidate for Governor and so acquire influence within the prison, did have a little to do with it.

Once he has acquired this influence he becomes the boss of the prison and devotes his talents to putting so much efficiency behind the prison reform ideal that before long there blossoms behind the bars a state of good cheer which makes "mutual welfare" seem cutthroat competition by comparison.

Our comic opera librettists have already realized the humorous possibilities in prison reform, but not more amusingly than Messrs. Megrue and Cobb. And so you leave John W. Blake, surrounded by convict-made mahogany furniture, studying the plans drawn by a bad bigamist but a good architect, and sighing for the early conviction of some interior decorators.

Of course George Nash is Blake. He and Miss Beecher help a lot, as do Felix Krembs, E. G. Robinson, and Joseph Slaytor. At concert pitch, they keep the melodramatic scenes of "Under Sentence" thoroughly interesting and do nothing to prevent the last act from being amusing. It is only polite to assume that it was intended to be amusing.

'MIDNIGHT FROLIC' IS LAVISH

Ziegfeld's Newest Edition Outshines All Its Predecessors.

The latest edition of Florenz Ziegfeld's "Midnight Frolic," which had its first presentation Monday midnight before an audience that embraced all who live and move and have their being in Broadway, out-Ziegfelds all its predecessors. It is like the others only more so. It is a Ziegfeld-Urban-Wayburn show of beautiful women, frocks and tableaux designed for the business man who is too tired to go home after the play.

Josef Urban, it would seem, despaired ever of crowding enough color into one stage setting, so he let his copious art overflow the stage of the New Amsterdam Roof until it embraced the whole auditorium. This is as it should be since all the floor's a stage in this home of the fox-trot. Even the most florid adjectives pale in attempting to describe Mr. Urban's radiant color combinations, but those familiar with his art will be able to imagine the beauty of the new background when it is stated in mere words that great crystal columns rise into bowers of flowers of gold, from which two huge orange transparencies are suspended, and back of all this through a large circle in a wall of gold is a glimpse of lower Manhattan's illuminated skyscrapers set in an empryean blue sky.

Against this Manhattan Night's background Frances White sings and dances; a young man in black face named Eddie Cantor cavorts in Jolson-esque manner; Lucy Gillete performs prodigious feats of strength and balancing; Peggy Brooks sings in one of those dual voices beloved in the varieties; Bird Millman transforms a tight wire into a ballroom floor, and the chorus, clad more or less in beautiful costumes, sings jingly songs and dances with the unflagging spirit of all Wayburn choruses.

But these greatest of these is Frances White. First as a ragged urchin she sits perched on the overhead glass runway and sings about various methods of catching lobsters and again in fearfully and wonderfully made costume she trips about the floor with that deliciously bored air that is one of her principal charms. Miss White has substituted enuni for the conventional property abandon with great success, but it is doubtful whether this would prove as effective practiced by any one else.

One of the best chorus numbers is participated in by a quartet of lovely collie dogs that skip rope with girls in rompers and try to elude the kiddykars propelled by others of the chorus. In another number the girls play a tune with bells they wear. Lawrence Haynes, a tenor with better training than is usually squandered upon roof voices, sings the effective finale number. Into a huge gold melting pot young women in costumes typifying eight of the great nations dip, and who emerges? Why the "Midnight Frolic" maid, naturally.

One might search the world and not find anything quite as unique or lavish as this midnight revue.

At Tea Time—
That ravenous appetite doesn't come wholly from the autumn zest in golf or tennis. It's due to the dainty way the food is served and to the interesting people who gather about the dining rooms and corridors of the spacious Laurel House.
Besides golf and tennis there is riding, driving and automobiling over splendid roads; hunting, trap-shooting, polo; with rowing, fishing and canoeing on the Lake.
Imagine the brilliant, balmy air, the sweet odor of pines, the exquisite autumn tints and the perfect service of a famous hotel and you will have some of the pleasures of a stay at the Laurel House.
Many improvements make the hotel more delightful than ever this Fall. Write for booklet, rooms, plans, etc.

WORK FOR THE COMMISSION.

The protest made to the State Department at Washington by the French and English Embassies in regard to the practical seizure by the de facto Government of Mexico of two banks established in the capital by financiers of these countries may not turn out to be so serious as it seems. Investigation may show that the action against the banks was due to ignorance and an excess of zeal in some of CARRANZA's inexperienced subordinates. Similarly the complaints of the representatives of American mining interests, put before the American members of the commission at Atlantic City, may be based on operations of the de facto Government that were not intended to have such serious results. It has been the understanding that CARRANZA has no idea of confiscating the property of foreigners. The new tax regulations, as explained by the American owners or operators of mines, are practically confiscatory, and the result has been much more damaging to Mexican industry than CARRANZA could have foreseen. Fully 60,000 Mexicans have been thrown out of employment because of the stoppage of work at the mines and smelters.

It is just such matters as these that should be gravely considered by the international commission. The two foreign protests are but comparatively unimportant forerunners of a flood of such statements from European Governments which the State Department must take under consideration. The complaints of the mining men are a sample of some thousands of other perfectly reasonable complaints of which notice must be taken. Mexico cannot be rehabilitated until she has paid all her just debts and re-established justice throughout her domain. The Government of the United States will naturally be looked to by all foreigners and Americans to use its influence with any Mexican Government that exists to compel payment. If our Government fails, the foreign Governments will take the matter in their own hands, and that will be the beginning of another chapter. It is not the intention of our Government to fail in this matter.

The international conference is purposeless unless the ways and means of actually restoring order are to be soberly considered by it and the facts and opinions presented by the competent American members heeded. Yet since the sessions of the commission were resumed at Atlantic City the only thing the Mexican representatives have discussed is the possibility of the immediate withdrawal of our troops from Mexican soil. From Mexico City reports come continually that CARRANZA insists that no other matter except that must be considered by his Commissioners. The withdrawal of the troops would be most desirable if CARRANZA had the power to protect life and property in Northern Mexico. An international patrol of the border would be arranged for if there was any ground for belief that CARRANZA could provide an adequate patrol on his side of the line. The ascertained facts do not warrant this belief. If we withdrew our troops there would be much more trouble along the border than there has been. Consideration of the question of withdrawal, therefore, must be postponed and the commission should give its remaining time to an intelligent consideration of those important problems which must be solved before a stable Government can be established in Mexico.

HINDENBURG FAILS.

Nothing could better show the unhappy state of mind in which the Berlin rulers now are than their attempts to misrepresent the fighting which is going on between MACKENSEN's army and the Russo-Rumanian forces. The reason why it is misrepresented is that this was to have been HINDENBURG's great strategic movement, the movement by which he was to have changed the face of things and restored the offensive to Germany. To do just that was the purpose for which he was put in command after FALKENHAYN's plan had failed. Germany acclaimed him as her savior. He was to draw victory from defeat by a change of plan. Germany looked to him for it, he undertook to do it, and he has failed. Hence the nervous efforts to conceal the failure and put a mask on the truth, that the worship of HINDENBURG, the Hindenburg legend, may persist a little longer. For when that falls to the ground there will be little left to furnish food for hope.

FALKENHAYN staked Germany's chances on Verdun; he failed, and was removed. HINDENBURG has always believed that the smashing should be done in the east, and he attempted to repeat the smashing tactics of 1914 and 1915, with Rumania as the victim this time. In the west the Germans simply resisted as best they could the attack of the French and British, but in the east they were not only to take the offensive but to smash through the Rumanian lines and get in the rear. They began by taking Tutrakan, and then reported a decisive victory over the Rumanians. A decisive victory, when announced by Berlin, has never meant merely a local success, however brilliant; it has meant one that decided the result. Later it turned out that this battle had left everything as it was before, except that the weight of the Russian and Rumanian army on MACKENSEN's front was steadily increasing. Then came the announcement of another great victory, and now MACKENSEN is obviously being driven back, while a Russian-Rumanian army of unknown size has crossed the Danube and got in his rear.

Even if MACKENSEN should repulse his assailants in such a way as to entitle him to claim a victory, the object of his campaign has failed. He could not follow the old German tactics and smash through at the beginning, though he tried, and now his offensive is fast being turned into a defensive. But this cannot be admitted; for to admit it would be to bring the German nation face to face with the fact that the demigod HINDENBURG is only mortal, as mortal as FALKENHAYN; and the moral effect of the blind faith in HINDENBURG has been of incalculable value to the German rulers in allaying apprehension and stilling discontent.

NOT EVEN MIDDLE-AGED.

The reporter appraised that alert figure with his eye; a round face, still unwrinkled, with a strong chin and a firm mouth; eyes quick, inquisitive, ready to flash on provocation; a sturdy, active form and a light, nimble step; hair barely graying, but not whitening. "Young," he jotted down; then, remembering that there was a 24-year-old son to be accounted for, he changed it to "middle-aged."

Ten years ago that alert figure, full of the vigor which we generally call "the vigor of youth," quit the Senate that clear head had so long helped to rule and direct, because SPOONER thought it was time for him to begin making money for his family, now growing up. He had an absurd idea that he was getting on in years, a thing he will never do. And with him went a good deal of the youth of the Senate. Solemn, old young men of 30 succeeded him, and ponderous, pompous, empty talk took the place of his flashing wit and his strong sense. He had played enough, and he went forth to begin life. Fifty years ago Captain SPOONER of the Fiftieth Wisconsin was brevetted Major for gallantry; now a reporter calls him "middle-aged," and that reporter exaggerates slightly. JOHN C. SPOONER, in his seventy-fourth year, is as old as he feels, like a man, and as old as he looks, like a woman, and he is still young. Such a man makes a liar of Father Time.

THE MILK STRIKE.

Milk continues to be spilled up-State and the shortage increases in this city. The greater the scarcity of milk the greater the probability of a sympathy strike against the methods of the ingenuous producers who conceive that their rights to organize include a right to forbid all dealings with the organized distributers. The farmers think that their combination to raise their prices is all right, but that the combination of the distributers to reduce their costs is all wrong.

The consumers take a detached view. Nobody combines to reduce prices to them, not even themselves. The law, for the good of their health, forbids them to buy cheap milk. That is trying, if necessary, since hunger is sure and many of small means are willing to take a chance on disease. The farmers would be willing to supply "raw" and "loose" milk, for the profit to them would be the same. But the health authorities are adamant.

The rage of battle is so strong on Foods Commissioner DILLON that he says: "I plan to build a co-operative "distributing plant in New York "which will put them [the distrib"uters] out of business." Nobody loves the distributers particularly, but it strikes some as odd that an official of the State should be so desirous to put them out of business that he is going to build another distributing plant. Unless he builds it out of his own pocket, or the pockets of the taxpayers, the cost of the unnecessary duplication of plant will find its way into the cost of milk. The dairymen think that the distributers should supply the pasteurizing and distributing facilities at their own expense. The distributers seem to think that the farmers ought to supply their plant in the same way.

There is nothing to be arbitrated, of course. Nobody arbitrates nowadays. The distributers "must" buy through the Dairymen's League, even though they prefer to deal with individuals. Also the distributers "must" pay the producers another half cent a quart. The spokesman for the Dairymen's League—not a trust—authorizes the statement, in fact he makes it himself. That is the issue on which the city must go without milk. At least life was quieter, with fewer things one after another, when officials executed the laws with single-minded zeal and took sides in trade disputes less obtrusively or not at all.

THE GLARING HEADLIGHT NUISANCE.

Another automobile fatality, directly attributable to the use of blinding headlights, which is still legal in this State, has been reported. At the trial of the owner of the automobile which killed Mrs. E. M. TAYLOR on the Old Country Road on Long Island the driver of the car testified at Mineola yesterday that the light of an approaching car blinded him so that he could not see the woman walking in the road. So many motorists have had similar experiences, although happily their own nerves have suffered more frequently than pedestrians, that this testimony will seem to them entirely credible. The risk of accidents of this kind will not be diminished until a statute is enacted and enforced which forbids the use of headlights the rays of which, if undimmed, are cast more than forty-two inches above the level of the road, as has been proposed.

It is the part of careful driving as well as of the courtesy of the road to dim or lessen the intensity of the headlights when another automobile is seen approaching at night. The difficulty with this rule as a measure of public safety is that, like so many other factors in motoring, the "other fellow" is not always either careful or courteous. There is no safety in relying upon him to answer your signal that you neither desire to blind nor be blinded. It is a situation which calls for legal restraint backed up by adequate punishment for neglect.

Persons living in cities are apt to be impressed by such figures as those of the National Highways Protective Society, which show an unenviable record of 53 killings by automobiles in the streets of New York City for September, rather than by the occasional but increasingly frequent fatalities on the country roads. But in proportion to population and traffic these fatal roadside accidents are far more numerous than those in the city. In very great measure, both when pedestrians and when other vehicles are involved, they are to be laid at the door of the glaring headlight.

PRIMARY EXPENSES.

Running in the primaries is usually a costly enterprise. The perhaps too rash belief in many States blessed with the direct primary is that no poor man need apply. The expense accounts of some of the candidates in the New Jersey primaries show curious dissimilarities. Mr. COLGATE, a beaten aspirant for the Republican nomination for Governor, spent nearly $26,000. Mr. RECORD, another vanquished candidate for the same office, spent nearly $20,000; Mr. EDGE, the winner, nearly $22,000. Mr. WITTPENN, the unopposed Democratic candidate, managed to disburse $7,151. A modest sum compared with the others, but too large. No man should be allowed to spend as much as the smallest of these amounts in promoting his candidacy.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN, who got the Republican nomination for Senator, accounts for a little more than $12,000; Mr. MURPHY, who didn't get it, for about the same. They are rich men, like Mr. COLGATE and Mr. EDGE. That is no reproach to them. No honorable and competent man should be kept out of public life on account of his wealth. GEORGE WASHINGTON was a plutocrat of simpler times. But the call for a lot of money for primary expenses, and, from the winner, of a lot more for campaign expenses, puts men of moderate means out of the running.

Senator MARTINE's renomination bill was only $550. Good for the "farmer of Plainfield," even if he doesn't farm. Besides, he has run for office so many times that he would be in the poorhouse if he had to pay high for his whistle. Attorney General WESCOTT, his chief rival for the nomination, is poorer by $1,841, and a third candidate, with no ghost of a chance of success, gave more than $1,000 for his amusement. The long purse seems to be a Republican requisite in New Jersey. So it is to Democrats in some other States. Without any regard to partisanship, and without doubting the essential innocence of primary expenses, it remains true that they are generally far too fat.

PAUL AS A CAPITALIST.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER's observation that if the Apostle PAUL had lived today he would have been a captain of industry is a delicious example of every man's unconscious disposition to overrate the kind of activity that interests himself. It is easy to see what he had in mind; PAUL was an organizer, certainly, and a man of executive ability. But he belonged mentally to an order of intellect so different from the organizing one that the remark throws more light on Mr. ROCKEFELLER's mind than on PAUL's. It is not necessary to say that there were great capitalists in PAUL's day, and that, as he was undoubtedly well to do, he could have joined their ranks if he had had any turn for that kind of thing. What Mr. ROCKEFELLER means is that the cast of civilization has so changed that in our day the organization of industry is the great task for men who represent the spirit of the age. But in PAUL's day the task of civilization was the organization of government and law; and PAUL did not turn his hand to these things. It would be as sensible to say that, as GRANT was a man of organizing genius, if he had been born twenty years later he would have been a captain of industry.

The work for which PAUL's mind was fitted was not a work in which he would have represented or incarnated the spirit of his age, or of any age in which he might have lived; it was the kind of work which takes no account of ages, and his was the kind of mind which such a work enlists. This is a thing which Mr. ROCKEFELLER does not understand; but his failure to understand it is characteristic of men who, seeing that a certain phase of activity embraces the century, think it is all-embracing, because it is the phase that interests and enlists themselves.

THE TRANSCONTINENTAL TRAIN.

A socially and intellectually distinguished band of Hughes woman campaigners is speeding joyously and luxuriously westward, a special beam of light from the East. The Hughes woman's transcontinental train started from the Grand Central Station with twenty-five suasive orators aboard, and others will be added to the force on the way. Twenty-eight States, a hundred cities, are to hear the virtues of Mr. HUGHES and Republicanism set forth by charming advocates, the least honey-tongued of whom, it is safe, if no high compliment, to say, should be able to speak for the fortunate candidate more effectually than he seems able to speak himself.

This political expedition to the expectant Occident, run and paid for by women, will be met and greeted in its progress, everybody hopes, with the respectful curiosity and the sympathy which such a forerunner of triumphant feminism deserves. As sex solidarity on wheels, it reminds an as yet unawakened country of that agitation and condition which perturbed Mr. HUGHES till, standing "firmly" on the Republican national platform and State woman suffrage, he made a platformlet of his own, and volunteered, unofficially, to settle this portentous peril of sex solidarity "speedily" by the longest, most difficult, in fact the impossible, means of a Federal amendment.

The Sex Solidarity Special may also be a goad to Mr. HUGHES, whose zeal for the Cause and longing to amend the Constitution, in consideration of the votes of the mostly mythical Woman's Party and the imagined solid "4,000,000 woman voters in the suffrage States," seem to have cooled since he has been campaigning in non-suffrage States. The charge of the female special train into the bowels of the West should remind him of a neglected duty. What a pity if he should be accused of "vacillation" and "insincerity." If Federal votes for women be a boon, be a necessity to avoid the perils of sex solidarity, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, all the Eastern and Middle parts of the infidels, ought to be warned and saved in time. As a Republican, he, from the necessity of the term, is "firm" as the everlasting hills and brave as the Nine Champions consolidated with the Knights of the Round Table and the Peers of CHARLEMAGNE. This feminine invasion of the West is a reproof and admonition to him. Now is the hour for firmness with sagacity.

The Western woman suffrage States are already blessed with Eastern missionaries, the goddesses, the bosses, the rank and file of the Woman's Party. These Western States behold and wonder at them with the humorous shrewdness of the Western temperament. The terrible approach of the Hughes feminists is regarded by the Westerners, there is but too much reason to believe, in something of that reprehensible, scoffing, amused, and weary way in which Chinatown used to look upon slumming parties from Fifth Avenue. This spirit will disappear when the accomplished campaigners are heard. They are earnest, they are able; and in places which Mr. HUGHES visited in his "preliminary campaign" they should be especially welcome, not merely for themselves, but for their contrast with the great movie orator.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Westchester Strike Situation.

Up in Westchester County the ordinances that prohibit the employment on street cars as motormen and conductors of men who have not had fifteen days of experience under competent instructors in the town where they are to serve, are now receiving from a seriously inconvenienced public the consideration that its members never thought of giving them before they were passed, or, for that matter, until their deplorable effects had been made manifest by two strikes. Now, it is plain enough to all that this prohibition never had any purpose except that of preventing the use of strikebreakers, and that its pretense of protecting travelers by street cars was a wholly empty one.

Surely, nobody can honestly contend that it takes fifteen days of constant instruction to enable a man of ordinary intelligence to perform the duties of a conductor. An hour or two of oral teaching, and as much of service under oversight, ought to give, and would give, such a man all the secrets of this simple art. As for motormen, they would need, or at any rate would profit by, a somewhat longer training, but even for them fifteen days is a period absurdly long, especially in these days of powerful air brakes and with the electrical mechanism of street cars so standardized as to be almost "fool proof."

But, as the developments of the past few days in Westchester County have shown, the strikers have no intention of letting the companies give to new men the sort of instruction the ordinances demand. The moment an attempt to do it began there was resort to violence, and even the few available men who did meet the legal requirements as to experience were the victims of vicious assault. In other words, the companies are allowed neither to violate the fifteen-day ordinances nor to operate under their provisions. They are not, that is, if the strikers can prevent it, and as yet their ability has equaled their desires.

The situation, however, is not wholly favorable to the strikers or wholly unfavorable to the companies. That is because the companies are now not amenable to the penalty of franchise forfeiture for not running cars that could be imposed upon them except for the ordinances. They are thus relieved from a severe pressure to settle with the men on strike, and they cannot be made to maintain a service made impossible by the law.

Anyhow, He Serves the Germans.

By refusing to let the little groups for which Messrs. O'LEARY and KOELBLE are such voluble and efficient spokesmen display at their bazaar the first Holland submarine, the President of the International Bronx Exposition (of which most of us now hear for the first time) makes one wonder if he really is as strictly neutral with regard to the European war as he declares himself to be.

As the exploitation which the boat in question would certainly receive from men who exult over the sinking of the Lusitania and all the other uses to which submarines have been put by the Germans would be sure to confirm existing sympathies with the Allies, and to create new ones, there is at least excuse for suspecting that President MCGARVIE differs from Messrs. O'LEARY and KOELBLE chiefly in being wiser than they as to the nature of American sentiment and how it can be affected.

A sincere neutral, indeed, would object to the acerbation of feeling against Germany that would follow the sort of talk about submarines for which the old Holland craft would serve as text at the O'LEARY-KOELBLE festivity, and he would prevent that talk if he could. But Mr. MCGARVIE's action would also be taken by a judicious hater of England or lover of Germany, and so hard is it to believe that any American is without preference between the two sides engaged in the European conflict that Mr. MCGARVIE must not wonder if people fear that his neutrality is not quite as neutral as it might be.

"Lusitania Disaster."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish to protest against the use in the columns of the great newspapers of this country of the phrase "the Lusitania disaster." Surely the word disaster is generally taken to mean an accident. To the civilized world let it always be "the Lusitania crime."

FOR NATIONAL SERVICE.

Elihu Root Would Apply the Principles of the Law of 1799.

The following is a copy of a letter written by former Senator Elihu Root to Lieut. Gen. S. B. M. Young, President of the Association for National Service:

Clinton, N. Y., Sept. 17, 1916.

My Dear General: I am obliged to you for sending me the papers relating to the Association for National Service. We certainly need the spirit of national service in our country. It is a mistake to suppose that a people can have good government, peace, order, and progress for any long period without any effort on their part. We in the United States need to have our patriotism awakened, throw off our indifference, and think more of our duties as well as of our rights. Every one who is fit to be a citizen of a free country ought to be willing to serve the country when called upon, in accordance with his ability. The young men who are physically fit for military duty should hold themselves ready to fight for their country if need be, and if they are not ready when the need comes they will not long have any country, and they will not deserve to have any. The vast change in the way of carrying on war which has occurred within a very few years has created a situation in which it is perfectly plain that no country can be ready to defend her independence against foreign aggression except by universal military training and a resulting universal readiness for military service. The old way of waiting until war came and then calling for volunteers has become obsolete, and is no longer effective. The National Guard system is not adequate and cannot be made adequate to meet the needs of national defense under any real assault upon our rights. It is impossible to have an effective body of soldiers who serve two masters and are raised and organized to accomplish two different purposes. Universal training and readiness for service are not only demanded by plain common sense, but they are essentially democratic. They were required by law during the early years of our Republic, for every male citizen between the ages of 18 and 45 was required to be ready to fight for his country and was required to be trained and provided with arms in accordance with the simple needs of warfare in those days. It is only necessary now to apply the principles and requirements of the national law of 1790, adapted to present conditions.

You have my best wishes in your patriotic endeavors. With kind regards I am always faithfully yours, ELIHU ROOT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

When any group of workpeople engaged in a particular industry go on a strike because of grievances from which they cannot get relief, their appeal to the public is backed up by the sacrifices they make. For that reason the sympathy of the public is pretty sure to be with them. They are giving costly proof of their sincerity, and whether they are right or wrong in their demands, the fact that they think their claims are just commands respect and secures helpful support. I speak what I know, for I have frequently invited the leaders of such strikes, both men and women, to my church and given them an opportunity to state their case, and have seen the effect upon an audience. They are sure of effective sympathy, even when there is much to be said for the employer.

But when a group of such strikers, especially a large and powerful one, has so little faith in the right of their cause and so little hope of securing the support of the public that they call for a "sympathetic strike" of outside workers they are like the boy in trouble who throws himself on the sidewalk and howls and kicks.

The demand that at a time like this, with all the trouble that is abroad, and Winter approaching, the working people of the city should throw up their jobs, stop their wages, bring great hardship on themselves as well as on others, and embark upon a project of general disturbance, the effect of which for harm no man could measure, in support of such a group of men seems to me utterly unworthy. It is unmanly, as it is unreasonable. The fact that it irritates and eventually alienates public support is bad enough. Its unmanliness ought to be recognized by the men and women of the local unions; and I venture to call attention to this aspect of the situation, especially in support of the clear-sighted men who are refusing to respond.

Where Are the Teutonic Authors?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE NEW YORK TIMES announces another volume of the most interesting Boston Encyclopedia of Folklore. But it is strange that the handsome set of books should not include the name of a single Teutonic author, although German research of pagan customs and superstitions has always led the way. Let us hope, for Boston's sake, that there is no intention to extend the abortive boycott of unhappy Paris memory from economic fields to the Republic of Letters, which rises above the narrow patriotism of aggressive nationalists, and, thanks to its cosmopolitan charter, recognises literary merit in whatever quarter superiority of intellect may be found.

An American Life for the Allies.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the first part of January of this year my son went to Canada and enlisted for service in the war in Europe. He went to England in April and the first part of July went to France. On Sept. 9 he was killed in action.

I gave my consent because I thought the liberty of the world was in danger, and that every man who could carry a gun and had no family to look after ought to go to its defense.

I have been told that I ought not to have allowed him to go as long as our own country was not at war and while there were hundreds of thousands of French Canadians who refused to go.

A PASSING AT TWILIGHT.

What was it that passed in the twilight—
What was it went singing by?
Dusk wakens so many a dream,
And each dream its cry.

I will go home to the evening star—
To a Light that is set at the edge of the world,
As another goes home to the cottage lamp
By the forest-side when the day is done.

I will go home to the evening star.
I am only awaiting the twilight wind;
Then will open softly the silver door;
And the lifting wind will bear me in.

I will go home to the evening star.
There are the tables with delicate food;
There are the couches spread over with dreams,

I will go home to the evening star.
There will be faces divine—as of gods;
There will be music—gone voices returned;
And there will be laughter, and wonder—and tears!

I will go home to the evening star,
Only now do I see that, long ago lost,

And each dream its ancient cry—
What was it that passed in the twilight,
Fading on high!

Baker Says Attacks on Army Aviation Section Have Not Been Substantiated.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—A formal rejoinder in the nature of a repudiation of the allegations recently made against the aviation section of the Signal Corps of the regular army was issued at the War Department today by direction of Newton D. Baker, the Secretary of War. In a prepared statement the assertion is made that the attacks on the aviation section have taken the form of "inspired editorials in the metropolitan press and in statements signed by Henry Woodhouse and Alan R. Hawley, both of the Aero Club of America"; that the charges have been thoroughly investigated under the personal direction of the Secretary of War himself, and that the allegations have not been substantiated in the slightest degree.

The allegations were aimed especially at Major William Mitchell, now serving as assistant to Colonel George C. Squier, Chief of the Aviation Section. Among the charges made were those of alleged inefficiency and general misconduct on the part of Major Mitchell. A long statement in the nature of an indictment against Major Mitchell was filed with the Secretary of War, and the character of the allegations was such that Secretary Baker felt it incumbent upon himself to take charge of the investigation. The War Department statement follows:

"The attention of the War Department has been called to attacks recently made upon the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps of the Regular Army. These took the form of inspired editorials appearing in the metropolitan press and in statements signed by Mr. Henry Woodhouse and Alan R. Hawley, both of the Aero Club of America.

"The charges were to the general effect that the development of military aeronautics was being greatly impeded by the alleged inefficiency and general misconduct of Major William Mitchell, now serving as an assistant to Colonel George C. Squier, Chief of the Aviation Section of the Signal Corps. This retardation of development, it was claimed, was especially aimed at the National Guard. The implication was even advanced that the funds appropriated by Congress for the aviation training of the guard were being utilized for other purposes.

"These charges were received by the department with the greatest concern, and the most searching and thorough investigation was instigated under the immediate and personal direction of the Secretary of War himself.

"This investigation is now complete, and it has not only failed to substantiate the allegations even in the slightest degree, but has shown clearly that the development of this important branch of the military establishment is being conducted with energy and foresight. A firm foundation is being laid upon which a proper future expansion can be safely predicted.

"This does not mean that in point of size, or even perhaps of general efficiency of personnel, our flying corps has as yet reached the development attained in the battling armies of Europe under the sharp and immediate inspiration of and the actual experience derived from combat, but it does mean that this branch is keeping apace of the others in the acute military expansion now taking place in this nation.

"And it does mean that when the plans for the development of military aeronautics now being inaugurated reach fruition that as far as this branch is concerned the nation can view the future with confidence and serenity."

Hawley's Charges Against Mitchell.

Charges were first brought against Major Mitchell by Alan R. Hawley, President of the Aero Club of America, in a letter to the Secretary of War, on Sept. 13. In this letter, after reciting that a letter had been received, signed by Major Gen. A. L. Mills, late Chief of the Militia Bureau of the War Department, saying that Congress had appropriated $76,000 for the purchase and maintenance of four aeroplanes, to be used at a United States aviation school for the training of officers and enlisted men of the National Guard, Mr. Hawley said:

"I am amazed to find that, notwithstanding the fact that Congress has appropriated $9,640,800 for training hundreds of National Guardsmen, this letter states that Congress has only appropriated $76,000 for the training of National Guard officers and enlisted men, and that the number of National Guardsmen to be trained in aviation will not be in excess of fifty."

Mr. Hawley reviewed the aviation situation, and then said in regard to Major Mitchell:

"It is our duty in connection with this to advise you that we feel that much of this apparent antagonism against the National Guard is due to personal antagonism which Major Mitchell, assistant to Colonel Squier, has shown against the National Guard. We have had occasion to complain of the very unfair and extreme attitude which this officer has shown against the National Guard to Colonel Squier, to whom we wrote under date of July 28 and Aug. 24, advising that Major Mitchell had cast derogatory remarks about the National Guard, which remarks were utterly unbecoming an officer of the army and unfair to the National Guard."

The Aero Club, through Mr. Hawley, made public an open letter to Secretary Baker last night, dealing with the same subject and quoting Major Mitchell's remarks. This letter, it was announced, had been sent to 2,000 newspapers, all the members of Congress, all the Governors and Adjutant Generals of the United States, all the heads of the National Guard and Naval Militia, Mayor Mitchel's Committee of One Thousand, 3,500 leading women, the presidents of 519 general clubs throughout the country, about 1,000 Pan-American financiers, all the railroad presidents, and a number of others, making a total of about 9,500.

In the letter Mr. Hawley charges that Major Mitchell said "that while it is true that the plan to organize twelve aero squadrons for the twelve militia divisions was used as a basis for getting the appropriation, the Army Appropriation Bill does not specify what it shall be spent for, and the officers of the Aviation Section have decided to limit the National Guard as stated."

"We realised that since Major Mitchell was practically in charge of the details pertaining to such [aviation] matters," he says, "Colonel Squier having just returned from a four years' duty as military attaché in London and was not familiar with the current trend of events in Washington, this attitude of mind might interfere with the carrying out of the plans. But nothing was said about the matter until Major Mitchell, during a visit to the Mineola aviation centre, during a conversation regarding the National Guard's anxiety to develop in aviation, exclaimed, 'Hell with the National Guard! It will never amount to anything.'

"I was one of three people present when Major Mitchell so expressed himself, and was incensed to hear such derogatory expressions from an army officer, at a time when thousands of National Guardsmen were at the Mexican border protecting American lives and American property at a great sacrifice to themselves, their business, and their families. I considered it my duty to protest to Major Mitchell and to bring the matter to the attention of Colonel Squier, which I did, first in a letter dated July 28. Receiving no answer I wrote again on Aug. 14. I received no answer to these letters until Sept. 11, when I received a brief acknowledgment."

ANNULS CONVICTION OF W. V. COLE, HEALER

NEW TRIAL FOR DEFENDANT

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct 3.—The Court of Appeals today reversed the conviction of Willis Vernon Cole, Christian Science healer, and ordered him tried anew. Judge Chase wrote the opinion, which was concurred in by Chief Judge Bartlett and Judges Cuddeback and Cardozo. The records of the court state that Judge Collin did not vote, Judge Hogan was absent, and Judge Seabury did not sit in the case.

Cole was convicted in 1912 of illegally practicing medicine and fined $100. He was a sculptor and poet, and not a doctor, but he had offices at 225 Fifth Avenue, Manhattan, where he treated patients whose diseases he assumed to cure by Christian Science methods. His conviction was obtained through Mrs. Benzecry, a detective of the New York County Medical Society. By a divided court the Appellate Division affirmed his conviction. That court certified this question:

"Is the commercialized use of prayer for the avowed purpose of treating all persons seeking cure for all kinds of bodily ills the practice of the religious tenets of the Church?"

The Court of Appeals decision holds that, while the practice of healing by Christian Scientists would come within the definition of medical practice, the statute specifically exempts those who in the treatment of bodily ills follow out the tenets of any religion. Christian Science practitioners are protected by this exemption, according to the decision.

"Practicing medicine when unaccompanied by acts that are in themselves evil, vicious, or criminal," says Judge Chase in his opinion, "is not a crime at common law. Practicing medicine is not malum in se. It is important in the interests of public health and public welfare that a person holding himself out as a physician or healer of diseases should have the education, training, skill, and knowledge adequate for such purposes. Statutes designed to protect public health and the general welfare by regulating the practice of medicine have been enacted from time to time in some part of all the territory constituting this State since 1760.

"A person should not be allowed to assume to practice the tenets of the Christian Science or any Church as a shield to cover a business undertaking. When a person claims to be practicing the religious tenets of any Church, particularly where compensation is taken therefor and the practice is apart from the church edifice or the sanctity of the home of the applicant, the question whether such person is within the exception should be left to a jury as a question of fact.

"In this case the Court charged the jury: 'If you find from the evidence in this case that this defendant did engage in the practice of medicine as alleged in the indictment, within the definition which I have given you, it is no defense that he did what he did from any sense of duty, or that he did these acts in the practice of a religious tenet of the Christian Science Church.'

"We are of the opinion that the Court was in error in so charging the jury."

The Court of Appeals reversal of the conviction against Willis Vernon Cole, is the latest phase of a case which has been fought in the courts for more than five years. On the complaint of Mrs. Isabella Goodwin, a police matron, Cole was arrested Jan. 14, 1911, charged with violation of the public health law of 1907, which makes it a misdemeanor for anyone to practice medicine without a license. The New York County Medical Society undertook the prosecution through its attorney, Almuth C. Vandiver, and produced another witness, Mrs. Francis Benzecry, an agent of the medical society.

Both Mrs. Goodwin and Mrs. Benzecry told of visits to Cole's offices at 225 Fifth Avenue. They testified that the healer had not made examinations of their conditions and that the treatment, for which a fee was exacted, consisted simply of holding hands and reading from Mrs. Eddy's book, "Science and Health."

George W. Whiteside, attorney for the New York County Medical Society, said last night: "Just what action the society will take cannot be determined until we have the text of the decision handed down by the Court of Appeals. I hope to have a copy by next Monday night at the next business meeting of the Commission Minora of the Medical Society. The matter may require legislative action, if the medical societies can unite with the Public Health Department."

Cole issued the following statement last night:

"In rendering this decision, the Court of Appeals has struck a note of equity and given a fair deal to Christianity. The great Empire State refuses to make her sons and daughters criminals for walking in the footsteps of Jesus Christ. The command of the Master to heal the sick and preach the Gospel to every living creature cannot be annulled. I feel that this is a victory for the elementary principle of liberty, and that ultimately doctors as well as Christian Scientists will benefit by it. After all, are we not all brothers?"

DISCUSS MORTGAGE LAWS.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 3.—The convention of the investment bankers today discussed real estate bonds and mortgages. It adopted its committee's recommendation that all States follow the example of New York, Pennsylvania, and Ohio, wherein the mortgagee has full control of the property as soon as necessary legal steps can be taken, saying that this had done much to render these States popular as fields for loaning operations.

The convention also went on record as favoring an effort to unify the regulations and State laws in reference to mortgages.

By direction of the convention three universities are to be asked to give courses in bond salesmanship. The investment bankers will help defray the expenses.

Officers for the coming year will be chosen tomorrow.

Raymond Hitchcock came back to his beloved Broadway last night after a year's absence in London, where he was fearfully popular, with an accent, a monocle, an elastic lounge suit, and all of the other hallmarks associated in the American fancy with a stage Britisher. This droll Yankee comedian returned, as was fitting after his London conquest, in a most British musical play called "Betty," presented by our most British musical comedy producer, Charles Dillingham, at the Globe, the Gaiety of America.

While Mr. Hitchcock was holding forth at one playhouse in the Strand in a concoction entitled "Mr. Manhattan," "Betty," was a season's hit at another. It was the work of Gladys Unger, Adrian Ross, and Paul A. Rubens, an indefatigable trio of musical comedy makers, with some assistance by Frederick Lonsdale on the book, though heaven alone knows why that should have required more than one author.

Apparently "Betty" as offered at the Globe last night is the London "Betty" with few of the customary changes, for it is quite the most British musical piece that has invaded these shores since "Tonight's the Night." It is a musical comedy done in pastel; its humor, its sentiment, its music are so thin and light that without Mr. Hitchcock's vivid personality to infuse life into them they would never cross the footlights.

Fortunately Mr. Hitchcock and his wrist watch were almost constantly on hand, and there were many occasions for smiles, chuckles, and loud laughter. In a new version of his amusing curtain speech in which he discoursed on Auburn, the city of his birth, and Billy Sunday, whom he claimed as a fellow-townsman and actor, Mr. Hitchcock protested that it was awfully difficult for him to assume the British accent, which was really subtle boasting since he did it so well. When he had thus protested his neutrality and his undying Americanism he turned himself loose in the part, and was even more amusing in the last act than he had been in the other two.

The test of a comedian is in making old material seem new and lines sound witty that really are not, and in both of these feats Mr. Hitchcock was eminently successful. Almost every time Lord Raymond d'Arcy Hitchcock Playne spoke, the audience laughed, which more often was the result of Raymond Hitchcock's cleverness than of the authors'. It was, in fact, a Hitchcock triumph of mind over matter.

It would have taken a company of more expert players to have kept the serious moments of the play from becoming comic than Mr. Dillingham provided for "Betty." A peculiarly colorless cast, among whom, with the exception of the principal comedian, there was not one magnetic personality, allowed the finales, evidently intended to be taken seriously, to become as comic as the other portions of the piece. A pretty little English girl, Ivy Sawyer, acted the rôle of Betty, the serving maid, who married an Earl and then won his love, and Joseph Santley played the Earl. Miss Sawyer is pink and white, and so is her voice, and Mr. Santley can dance, but neither acted with warmth or spirit. So, too, Peter Page just missed being funny in the rôle of a dressmaker. These shortcomings only heightened the brilliance of the star's contribution.

Mr. Dillingham staged the play in his usual excellent taste. There were three attractive settings peopled with men and women in smart attire, and the chorus was particularly lovely to look upon, so that the eye was always pleased.

SAMUEL T. SHAW TO MARRY HIS TEACHER

The many friends of Samuel T. Shaw, the patron of art and former hotel proprietor, whose wife died about three years ago, will be interested to learn that he is to remarry. His bride will be Mme. Amalia Dalumi Luzzatto, a widow, of this city, and the marriage is to take place tomorrow at the Onteora Club, Onteora Park, in the Catskills.

It will mark the culmination of a romance which began when Mr. Shaw took up the study of foreign languages, not so very long ago, principally of Italian. Mme. Luzzatto, who gives private instruction in that language, was his teacher.

The ceremony will be performed in the little Episcopal Church at Onteora at 6:30 o'clock, and is to be attended only by the immediate relatives and a few intimate friends. A small reception will follow at the bungalow of the bride, after which the couple will start on their honeymoon.

Mr. Shaw's city home is at 280 West End Avenue, and he has a country place at Centre Island, Oyster Bay, L. I., where he is staying at present. He is widely known, not only for his interest in American art, but because of his hotel affiliations, from which he has retired. For thirty-one years he was a partner of Simeon Ford at the Grand Union Hotel, whose knell was sounded by the subway extension, and which is now only a memory, like the Astor House.

Mr. Ford married a sister of Mr. Shaw. During its day the hotel was regarded as one of the best-paying establishments in the city. Originally the old Westchester Hotel stood on the southeast corner of Park Avenue and Forty-second Street.

Early in the '70s Mr. Shaw's father bought the adjacent property and later on the Westchester Hotel itself. The senior Shaw was not a hotel man, but as he owned the property he kept the hotel open, building additions from time to time.

A feature of the hotel for many years was the collection of paintings by American artists. This was the private collection of Mr. Shaw, and was said to be the largest of its kind in the country. American artists who have made their reputations and those who were winning their way to fame were represented. As Mr. Ford once said of his partner: "When Mr. Shaw became an active partner in the hotel he brought with him his highly cultivated artistic sense and filled the walls with his high art paintings and work of the Fakirs." Mr. Shaw is the father of the Society of American Fakirs.

He has helped many struggling artists by purchasing their work, and is an active member of the Salmagundi Club, 14 West Twelfth Street, where the Samuel T. Shaw prize of $500 is eagerly sought after. He belongs to many art clubs, and is a prominent member also of the New York Athletic and the New York Yacht Clubs.

SETH LOW'S WILL DIVIDES $2,500,000

$400,000 TO INSTITUTIONS

Columbia and Church Pension Fund to Share Reversionary Fund of $27,000 or More.

The will of Seth Low, who died on his farm at Bedford Hills on Sept. 17, was filed for probate yesterday with the Surrogate of Westchester County at White Plains by Geller, Rolston & Horan of 22 Exchange Place, attorneys for the executors, Mrs. Low, the widow, and the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company. The widow and all of the next of kin waived issue and service of citation and consented to the probate of the will, and so Leroy Warren, the County Clerk, at once admitted the instrument to probate.

Estimates of the value of the estate vary between $2,000,000 and $4,000,000, with $2,500,000 as the figure of those having some knowledge of Mr. Low's affairs. The will gives the bulk of the estate to the widow in trust, the principal sum to be divided after her death among Mr. Low's nephews and nieces and various religious and educational institutions.

Bulk of Estate to Widow.

The bequests then follow in twenty paragraphs. Mrs. Low receives $100,000 outright, the income for life of a trust fund of $400,000, and the income for life of the residuary estate, which, it is estimated, will be about $2,000,000.

In addition Mrs. Low receives all of the jewelry and personal effects of her husband not otherwise disposed of.

Mr. Low directs that after the death of his widow the residue of his estate shall be divided into 200 equal parts, and, estimating this residue at $2,000,000, each part will be $10,000. Nephews and nieces are to get 150 of these parts.

Seven of the parts Mr. Low gives as a trust fund to St. Ann's Protestant Episcopal Church of Brooklyn, the income to be paid for the current expenses of the parish by the Trustees of the Diocese of Long Island.

Mr. Low also gives seven of the parts to the Endowment Fund of St. George's Protestant Episcopal Church. He gives two parts to St. Phebe's Mission in Brooklyn as a memorial to his sister, Harriette Low, and five parts to the rector and visitors of the University of Virginia to be known as "The A. A. Low Fund, as a memorial to my father and in affectionate remembrance of my brother."

Five parts are bequeathed to Berea College, at Berea, Ky., and five parts to the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute, two negro institutions.

"As a memorial to my father, A. A. Low, in Canton, China, the place where he spent seven years of his life," the will continues, "I give and bequeath to the Trustees of the Canton Christian College seven of said parts for the general purposes of the college."

A Revision to Columbia.

Mr. Low provides a trust fund of $15,000 for his cousin, Ellen Almira Dow, and another trust fund of $12,000 for Annie Hughes, the daughter of his old nurse, Mary Ann Hughes, both beneficiaries to receive the incomes from these funds for life. After their deaths the sum of the two funds, $27,000, plus any parts of the residuary estates which through the death of beneficiaries or for any reason may not be allotted is to go in equal shares to the Church Pension Fund and Columbia University.

In making absolute gifts, Mr. Low's will reads:

"I give and bequeath to my nephew, namesake, and godson, Seth Low, son of my brother, Abbot Augustus Low, $10,000, and the gold watch worn by my father for many years and given by him to me, the first watch I ever had.

"I give and bequeath to my nephew, namesake and godson, Seth Low Pierrepont, son of my sister, Ella, $10,000 and the loving cup presented to me by my associates in the city administration during my term as Mayor of New York. I present this cup to my nephew and namesake in recognition of his own good service as Chargé d'Affaires for the United States at Santiago, Chile, during the settlement of the Alsop Claims.

Mr. Low gives his portrait of President Monroe by Gilbert Stuart to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and he distributes various other portraits and works of art among nephews and nieces, the bequests to take effect, however, only after the death of his widow.

Every Servant Remembered.

The will leaves $50 to each of Mr. Low's household servants who had been in his employment less than a year at the time of his death, and $50 for each year or fraction thereof to each servant who had been employed more than a year.

"In recognition of a loyal service such as money cannot buy," and in memory of long friendship with William H. H. Beebe, his late secretary, Mr. Low gives his house at 425 West 117th Street to Mr. Beebe's widow.

Mr. Low directs that certain items on his private books shall not be collected by his executors, "I hereby giving and bequeathing," he adds, "to the various persons charged therewith the respective amounts."

Mr. Low authorizes his executors in case his widow does not wish to operate Broad Brook Farm to organize a corporation to operate it "for the general benefit of the entire tract or of a community of occupants."

WILL OF ALEXANDER MORTEN

Bulk of $500,000 Estate Will Eventually Go to Charitable Institutions.

The will of Alexander Morten, head of Morten & Co., liquor importers, disposes of an estate of about $500,000, the bulk of which will go eventually to charitable institutions. His widow, Mrs. Marjorie Morten of 141 East Twenty-first Street, gets the income from her husband's residuary estate for life or so long as she remains single. If she remarries she will receive an income of $3,000, and the remainder of the income is to be divided among six charitable institutions, which also get the principal on her death.

These institutions are the Little Sisters of the Poor, the Dominican Sisters of Sick Poor, the Little Sisters of the Poor of the Assumption, the Working Girls' Vacation Society, the National Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild, and the People's Home Church and Settlement. The first three receive two-ninths each, and the others one-ninth each. The will states that each bequest will amount to at least $35,000.

The decedent left his large collection of silver cups and trophies to his brother, Edward Morten, K. C., of London, and to other relatives in England, with the request that they be kept in the family. The will provides for various employes, as follows: Mary J. Healy, $7,500; Emile P. Barney, $1,500; James C. Jenkins and Arthur Fallon, $1,000 each.

Mr. Morten directed that his body be cremated.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Oct. 3.—The will of George H. Schrader, a millionaire philanthropist of Brooklyn, who left the bulk of his two-million-dollar estate to Caroline Rest, a home for convalescing mothers and babies at Hartsdale, N. Y., was admitted to probate today by Surrogate Sawyer of Westchester County.

The probate had been held up for months because it was learned that Mr. Schrader had made a will in Iceland, in which he left all the money he had in the Landsbank of Akureyri or Reykjavik to the Caroline Rest Fund of Akureyri. Mr. Schrader went to Iceland to establish homes for ponies found wandering ill and footsore on the icy barrens. He was drowned on his way back to the United States.

For some time it was a question as to whether Mr. Schrader was actually dead, but the Captain of the vessel made an affidavit that Mr. Schrader was found missing after the storm had subsided. Surrogate Sawyer, in admitting the American will to probate, had to find that Mr. Schrader was legally dead.

GERMANS CAPTURE THE IRISH BAZAAR

EDITOR GIVES A WARNING

How thoroughly certain elements of the German-American and Irish-American population of New York are working hand in hand, in domestic politics and the international affairs of the United States, was indicated by the personnel of the committees now engaged in planning the Irish Relief Fund Bazaar which is to be held in Madison Square Garden from Oct. 14 to 22 next.

At the offices of the bazaar committees in the Fitzgerald building, Broadway and Forty-second Street, of which there are two—one German and the other Irish—it was frankly admitted that the Teutonic organizations of the city, among them the German-American Alliance and the United German Societies of New York, were active in the bazaar management and that their aid was welcomed.

John J. O'Leary, who is President of the General Bazaar Committee, has even gone so far as to state, according to The Gaelic-American, that the bazaar was to be "the foundation of the confederation of the German and Irish people in America." Mr. O'Leary is a brother of Jeremiah A. O'Leary, President of the American Truth Society, the pro-German organization which announced last week that it would work against the election not only of President Wilson, but of every Democratic candidate for Congress in New York City except Henry Bruckner. It was to Jeremiah O'Leary that President Wilson sent his now famous telegram last week in which the President spurned the support of the Truth Society's President and others "like him."

Pro-German as Well as Irish.

The fact that the bazaar is to be a pro-German as well as an Irish affair was indicated at the meeting held in Madison Square Theatre last Sunday night, which was announced at a meeting to ratify the bazaar plans, but which turned out to be an anti-Wilson demonstration. So bitter was the feeling shown that even John Devoy, editor of The Gaelic American, arose at the close of the meeting and advised those present not to let politics enter into the management of the bazaar.

"Anybody who wishes to talk politics," said Mr. Devoy, "should be careful not to discuss such subjects in connection with the bazaar. When you enter the bazaar doors leave politics behind you. This is to be a philanthropic enterprise to help our suffering people in Ireland and politics should have no part in it if it is to be the success we want it to be."

According to a statement given out at the offices of The Gaelic American yesterday, Mr. Devoy did not mention any of the nations that are at war nor did he say, as has been reported, that the three Roman Catholic Cardinals in the United States would have nothing to do with the bazaar if it was permitted to be used as an instrument for the furtherance of German propaganda in the United States. It was stated at the Irish-German headquarters of the committee yesterday afternoon that the Cardinals had not been asked to give their official approval to the enterprise, and that it was doubtful if they would be.

Alphonse G. Koelble, President of the United German Societies of New York, is directing the work of the German organizers and also aiding in the directing of the Irish part of the bazaar.

Many Teutons on Committee.

The meeting at which the statement was made that the bazaar would prove to be the foundation of a German-Irish confederation in this country was held in Mannerchor Hall on Sunday, Sept. 23. The meeting was a closed one, but a report of what transpired appears in The Gaelic American of last Saturday. It was at that meeting, which was held under German auspices, that Mr. O'Leary spoke. This is the account of the meeting as published in The Gaelic American:

"A meeting was held last Sunday evening at Männerchor Hall of the German patrons connected with the Irish Bazaar to be held at Madison Square Garden Oct. 14 to 22 inclusive. The meeting was presided over by Dr. William C. Popcke, the representative of 120 German Lutheran churches in Greater New York.

"The President of the bazaar, John J. O'Leary, addressed the gathering, which filled the hall to capacity. Mr. O'Leary impressed upon his hearers that Ireland needs help and needs it badly. The true condition existing in Ireland today is concealed from the American public by the British censorship. The bazaar will give Ireland its much needed help.

"He impressed upon his audience that the Irish people at home and abroad are more nearly united than at any period since the English invasion, and that the hierarchy and clergy are practically a unit against England. He made an appeal to the representative Germans present for their earnest help, and stated that the bazaar would be the foundation of the Confederation of the German and Irish people in America."

At this meeting the following were made Honorary Presidents of the bazaar: Bernard H. Ridder, editor of the New Yorker Staats-Zeitung; Julius Holz, editor of the New Yorker Herald; Oscar S. Seitz, editor of The German Journal; H. G. Henrici, Brooklyn Free Press; Judge George Freifeld, Surrogate G. M. S. Schultz of the Bronx, Joseph Frey, National President of the German Catholics; Dr. A. von Grimm, representing the Austrians; Geza D. Berks, Hungarian editor, representing the Hungarians; W. Harrmann, representing Staten Island; Major Charles Lenz, President of the Northeast Singers League; K. W. Neschoff, German Club; Dr. William C. Popcke, representing German Protestant Churches; C. Rephaus, President of German Veteran League, and ex-Sheriff Grell, representing the Plattdeutsche organizations.

List a Surprise to Him.

The members of the Irish Committee of the bazaar, in addition to Mr. O'Leary, are Thomas Hughes Kelly, Edward G. Moore, Supreme Court Justice Daniel F. Cohalan and George J. Gillespie.

Mr. Gillespie is Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Irish Relief Fund. He said yesterday that until told by a TIMES reporter he did not know of the prominent part that the Germans had in arranging for the bazaar. He said that it was the first time he had heard of the naming of the officials of so many German-American societies as honorary presidents of the affair.

"I would like to see not only Germans, but Frenchmen, Italians, in fact everybody, just so they are good Americans, interested in the bazaar," said Mr. Gillespie, "and I think it would be a matter to be deeply regretted if politics or anything else of a partisan nature was permitted to interfere with the philanthropic purposes of the undertaking."

ATTACKS GERARD RECEPTION.

Kriegerbund Hopes Germans Will Not Serve on Committee.

German-Americans are asked not to take part in the official reception by the city to Ambassador James W. Gerard when he arrives in New York from Germany on Oct. 10, in the following resolution adopted by the Deutsche Kriegerbund at a meeting held Monday night:

"Mayor John Purroy Mitchel has named a committee, in which are found many German-Americans with good names, to receive the American Ambassador in Berlin, James W. Gerard.

"Americans of German birth and of German origin are expected to sit in this committee side by side with a Robert Bacon, the 'eats 'em alive' German hater of the Morgan firm; an Adolph Ochs, THE TIMES; an Oswald G. Villard, The Evening Post; Ogden Reid, The Tribune; Frank A. Munsey, The Sun and Press; a Ralph Pulitzer, The World; a State Senator, Ogden L. Mills, who was especially prominent in the Senate for his anti-German agitation, and other 'men of honor' who have besmirched and abused the good name of Germans in an unexampled manner.

"We must take a stand on this matter and ask the gentlemen in the interest of our good German name not to associate themselves with this kind of fellows, to whom nothing is sacred if it is used to help destroy Germany.

"Why are there no receptions for Ambassadors Sharp from Paris and Page from London when they arrived here on visits? They have not done such a great service for their 'lord and master'—they have not robbed Germany of her best weapon against England, the 'U's,' by means of threats of war, and cried out triumphantly after this far from clean piece of work, 'Wilson has succeeded in bringing down the Kaiser!'

"And citizens with German blood in their veins are to co-operate in receiving this gentleman? We guess not!

"The whole thing appears to be a political manoeuvre calculated to create the belief that the German-Americans approve of Gerard's attitude in Berlin, something equivalent to an indorsement of Wilson's policy toward Germany."

Among the German-Americans who are members of the committee are George Ehret, Jr., Fritz Achelis, Bernard H. Ridder, William Knauth, Adolph Kuttroff, Herman A. Metz, Carl L. Schurz, Julius Hurzberg, Karl Neuhoff, R. Pogenstecker, and Dr. H. Schweitzer. Several who were spoken to regarding the resolution said that it was news to them, and as they had accepted the appointment to this committee they expected to serve in welcoming Ambassador Gerard.

BROOKLYN WINS NATIONAL LEAGUE PENNANT BY BEATING GIANTS AS PHILLIES LOSE TWICE

GIANTS SHOW NO SPIRIT

All Traces of Record-Breaking Prowess Gone and Robins Take Crucial Game with Ease, 9 to 6.

On this bright October morning you are invited to meet the winners of the National League pennant. Fans, shake hands with Brooklyn; Brooklyn, shake hands with the fans.

Uncle Wilbert Robinson and his happy Dodgers won the flag yesterday when they left themselves open to prosecution by committing a serious case of assault on the Giants. The Brooklyns won 9 to 6. As the Phils dropped two to Boston all traffic must keep close to the sidewalks and let the Brooklyn champions pass. It was the Giants' poor playing that gave Brooklyn the pennant.

A crowd of about 11,000 persons saw the Robins do the trick, and, although many of them were from this side of the East River, no one begrudged the fact that the Brooklyns grabbed the streamer. Goodness knows, they deserve it. They have struggled for sixteen years for the honor and now that they have it, why not make it unanimous?

In toying with the Giants yesterday Brooklyn simply held a rehearsal for the world's series. The Giants were loose and careless. The machinelike accuracy of their playing was missing. They looked like an automobile which had been taken all apart and could not be put together again. At certain stages the Giants seemed on the verge of collapse and it looked as if they were in need of a pulmotor or a few tanks of oxygen.

McGraw's men, who have been cutting deep into all known existing records for the number of games won, were higher up in the air than a débutante at her first reception. Most of them handled the ball just as if it were a hot potato. Brooklyn didn't hesitate about pounding McGraw's best known pitchers all over the outer terraces. The Giants' outfielders were leg weary chasing the ball.

Giants Start Vigorously.

McGraw's lads started out as if they were going to snow the Brooklyns under a fury of hits and runs, and then before the game was over they closed up like a morning glory in the sun.

Aside from the folks who paid their good money to see the Dodgers take the flag, several saw the game for nothing. The surrounding housetops, trees, and hillocks were jammed with Brooklyn citizens who are putting their good money in the bank instead of giving it over to Squire Ebbets. When the world's series is played in Flatbush next week the Squire will have to invent some new kind of screens to block the view of all these loyal Brooklyn fans who are swelling the assets of the Brooklyn banks.

You'd think—wouldn't you?—that the Brooklyn folks would be more or less grateful to the indifferent Giants when they finished second best to the Dodgers; but not so. They hooted and booed as if the Giants were trimming Robinson's boys instead of giving them an effective shove toward honor and glory.

McGraw's Pitchers Not in Form.

Sherrod Smith pitched for the Dodgers for a while, but he wasn't quite right, so big Jeff Pfeffer went in and held the Giants at a safe distance from victory. Among the Giant pitchers who took part were Rube Benton, Pol Perritt, and George Smith, the Columbia youth. Field Captain Charley Herzog gave the impression that he was sorely disappointed at the Giant pitchers and he held several conferences with both Benton and Perritt. At one stage Herzog seemed so mad that it looked as if he was going in and pitch himself.

The Giants got a running start and in the first inning piled up three runs, which is enough of a foundation for any good pitcher to work on. The manner in which Benton was pitching, however, gave the impression that he needed a dozen or more runs before he felt sure.

Burns beat out a bunt in the first inning and went to second when Smith threw wild to first. Herzog also bunted and was safe on another error by Smith. The Brooklyn pitcher seemed to be doing all he could to keep the pennant away from Flatbush. Robertson singled to left and scored Burns. Zimmerman dumped the ball in front of the plate and Otto Miller threw him out at first.

Robertson at second made a brainless play and tried to get to third, which was occupied by Herzog. Herzog tried to go home and was run down between the bases. Fletcher then slammed a long hit to left centre, Hy Myers misjudging the rap, and it rolled to the fence for a home run, Robertson scoring in front of "Fletch."

Giants Increase Lead.

Brooklyn got one of these runs back in the second, when Mowrey doubled to left and scored on a single by Iver Olson. In the third the Giants added another to their total of runs. Herzog got a single through second and Robertson singled to centre. Hy Myers again tried to throw away the game, making a lurid throw to third, while Herzog romped home.

The third inning was a nightmare for the Giants. Johnston got an infield hit and went to third on Daubert's safe slam. Myers forced Daubert at second and Wheat sent Johnston home with a neat single. Cutshaw's single scored Myers, and then Benton was yanked from the pastime.

With Perritt pitching, Mowrey singled and scored Wheat, and while Olson was being thrown out at first Cutshaw scored. That put the Brooklyns in the lead, 5 to 4. From that time on they won as they pleased. The Giants' opposition was futile and listless. You wouldn't believe that a club that won twenty-six straight games from all kinds of teams during the past three weeks could play such foolish baseball.

In the fifth Perritt singled and so did Burns. Burns hit to right and Perritt tried to go to third, but stopped short between the bases for a few minutes and was then thrown out at third. After Herzog fanned Robertson sent Burns home with a hit to centre.

Dodgers Become Listless.

With two gone in the same chapter Mowrey was hit by a pitched ball and went to third on Perritt's wild pitch, scoring on Olson's single. In the sixth Brooklyn also grew listless. Pfeffer doubled to right and got only as far as third on Casey Stengel's double. Daubert shot a rocket to right and Robertson threw Pfeffer out at the plate for a double play. Pfeffer moved about as fast as a disabled auto truck. Meyers singled to left and scored Stengel.

Cutshaw singled in the seventh and stole second. Mowrey's single sent Cutshaw home, and the former went to second on a passed ball. Perritt was invited to the bench and George Smith took up the flinging burden. Mowrey was caught napping off second by Bill Rariden, which was about the only good play Bill made yesterday.

The Dodgers gathered another straggling run in the eighth, when Stengel walked. He went to third on Smith's error and scored while Daubert was being exterminated at first. In the ninth the Giants got another run. With one out Holke singled, stole second with no opposition, and scored on Lobert's drive to centre. The score:

FIGURES TELL THE TALE.

The stretch drive, which for a month has been virtually a nose-to-nose race between the Robins and Phillies, came to a sudden and rather unexpected conclusion yesterday, for it is now impossible for Brooklyn to lose the golden fleece. Figures do not give the Phillies a look in.

The double defeat of Philadelphia by Boston, while Brooklyn was beating the Giants for the second time in succession, put the Phillies out of the running entirely. They can now win the two remaining games with the Braves while the Giants twice trim the Robins and still be half a game behind at the end of the season tomorrow.

Boston, by its double triumph over the Moranites, put a lead seal on third place—the goal for which it has been fighting so hard, and still has a chance to take second place from the sliding Quakers. Provided they win the two remaining games from Philadelphia, the Braves would fill in the runner-up position.

	Won.	Lost.	P. C.

The Phillies have one game unplayed with St. Louis, but the National League rules do not provide for the playing of such a game after the regular season, and, furthermore, the St. Louis team has practically disbanded, its season having ended on Sunday.

Boston can finish second by winning two more from Philadelphia, for then the standing would be:

Philadelphia	90	63	.58823

The Braves at least have third place clinched, for if they lose today and tomorrow, while the Giants win two more, the standing will be:

Watson M. Washburn gained permanent possession of the West Side Lawn Tennis Club's championship singles trophy when he won it for the third time on the Forest Hills courts yesterday, defeating Fred C. Baggs in the title round 9—7, 6—0, 2—6, 6—3. Baggs played brilliant but erratic tennis while Washburn was always steady.

Buddy Culloton, freshman football star last year at Columbia University, re-entered college yesterday, but will be ineligible for the Fall athletics. Culloton was regarded as certain to succeed in the competition for a position in the Light Blue and White backfield until he encountered difficulties with the faculty eligibility rules. It is probable, however, that he will be in good standing for the baseball season.

McGraw, "Disgusted," Says Team Disobeyed His Orders—Leaves Field in Fifth Inning.

Manager John J. McGraw of the Giants threw a bombshell after the game in Brooklyn yesterday when, in no uncertain terms, he made known his disgust over the listless, indifferent game his club had played against Brooklyn.

"I do not say that my players did not try to win," said the Giants' manager, "but they simply refused to obey my orders, and they disregarded my signals. When Perritt more than once deliberately took a wind-up with Brooklyn players on the bases, it was too much for me, and I lost my patience.

"Such baseball disgusted me, and I left the bench. I do not like indifferent playing of this kind after the hard work we have had this season. I refused to be connected with it."

This statement by McGraw substantiates the suspicions which many of the New York fans had when they watched the playing by the Giants, which was plainly of the bush league calibre. Manager McGraw first left the bench in the fourth inning, but he returned at the beginning of the fifth, and then became so annoyed at the exhibition his players were making that he went to the clubhouse.

It has been known for several days that there has been much gossip among the players about which teams should win the National League pennant. Manager McGraw noticed that some of the players had strong views on the subject, and he decided to put a stop to the talk.

Although Manager McGraw did not accuse his players of deliberately tossing the game away to Brooklyn, he made it known that the Giants did not play the game of which they were capable.

There has been bad feeling between the New York and Philadelphia Clubs since 1908, when Coveleskie, the Giant Killer, spoiled the Giants' chances to get into the world's series. Several times during the few years there have been outbreaks between the Philadelphia Club and the Giants, one of these being an attack on McGraw in 1912, which ended in a near riot, when the New York manager was struck by Addie Brennan, one of the Philadelphia pitchers.

It would take no mind reader to understand that when it came to a question of the pennant's going to Philadelphia or Brooklyn, just where the interest of some of the New York players would rest. For many days baseball fans have been discussing the situation as well as the players and on account of the years of friendship between McGraw and Robinson, which dates back to the old Baltimore Oriole days, there has been much wild speculation and gossip that the New York Club might favor the Brooklyns in the race.

There were many features of the Giants' play yesterday which were very unlike the tactics which the club pursued during its recent outburst of great playing. The Brooklyn batsmen hit many grounders to the infield which went as hits, although a dozen times during the last few weeks the same Giant infielders have fielded grounders which looked much more difficult. The Giants were careless on the bases and it was this feature of the game McGraw referred to when he accused his players of disregarding his signals.

Not once this season had any of the Giants' pitchers been so careless as to wind up their arms before delivering the ball when men were on the bases. When Perritt did this yesterday it gave advantage to the Brooklyn base runners. The Giants did not play together yesterday and there was more or less wrangling between the players. Early in the game it looked as if Herzog and Benton were going to have a serious engagement. When McGraw quit the team in the fifth and went to the clubhouse, Herzog, as field captain, was in charge, and the listless playing of the Giants continued to the end of the game.

The accusation of Manager McGraw has evidently stirred up a hornets' nest of trouble among the players. Last night they were to have a theatre party at the Rialto Theatre, but none of them appeared.

"Manager McGraw's suspicions in this matter are ridiculous," said Robinson. "His statement is very unsportsmanlike, and I am greatly surprised that he would say such a thing. It looks to me like an alibi for the wretched playing of his club, which seems to have gone to pieces under the strain of their record-breaking winning streak."

"I am proud of the boys for their game fight to land this pennant. Three different times this season, when it seemed as if we would clinch the honor, the team slumped temporarily and I think it is a big boost to their fighting spirit that on each occasion they came back and showed their gameness. There has been harmony among the players all season and they have all worked together at all times. They deserve the honor they have won because, even when things were breaking badly for us, they still had confidence that they would win out.

"They all worked hard to win, not only the players on the field but the boys on the bench were pulling for victory and helping us all they could. It has been a long, hard fight, but I think the players showed their mettle when they stuck to their task and refused to give up.

"I do not want to make any predictions about the world's series, but one thing I can assure you of, and that is, the Brooklyn team will do their very best and will show the same fighting spirit that they have shown all season."

YANKEES IN DREARY DRAW.

Two Extra Innings Fail to Break 9 to 9 Tie with Senators.

That baseball is dying hard at the Polo Grounds was proved yesterday when the Yankees and the Senators battled for eleven innings, scoring eighteen runs between them, only to tramp off the field at the close of hostilities with the score a tie at nine runs each. Many empty benches heard the announcement that a double-header would close the season today.

The quality of baseball during most of the two hours and forty-five minutes which the players spent on the field was so poor that the few civilians present conceived the idea that the members of Company G, Seventy-first Regiment, who occupied choice seats in the grandstand, were there in case it should be considered necessary to call out the National Guard in order to put down a rebellion. Nick Altrock of the visiting team made an official call on the guardsmen to distract their attention while his teammates were busy piling up errors, and it was probably due to his influence that the militiamen failed to interfere when Umpire Nallin insisted on prolonging the agony for two extra innings while a pale half moon was rising in silent protest.

The crowd in general exhibited no such tender feelings, and many merry quips enlivened the extra sessions. Nick Altrock protested in a loud voice that it was too light to play, while others asked the umpire to keep out of the glare of the electric lights. The crowning piece of irony was the lighting of a sheet of paper and counting it out in prize ring style, while the Yankees were blindly striking at unseen balls in their half of the eleventh.

As for the game itself both teams went through the motions, the only thing worth recording being the bulldog persistency with which the home team insisted in breaking forth with a new batch of runs to tie the score just as it appeared that the Senatorial representatives had attained a winning lead. All through the prescribed nine innings both sides were guilty of glaring errors and it was only after they were put on their mettle by the prolongation of the game that they began to field in a manner approaching major league ball.

Nick Cullop was the first victim, and in the two innings he performed he was touched for five hits, the visitors rolling up four runs in the first and one in the second. Buckles, a recruit from Scranton, was chosen to lead the rescue brigade, and he got along very nicely for two innings, but was yanked when the Senators gathered two more runs in the fifth. Love was substituted then and perhaps the most grievous error committed by the Yankees was his elimination, after no hits had been made off him in two innings, so that Nunamaker might pinch hit, and hit with no effect for him in the seventh.

Mogridge came in then and Griffith's stick men feasted off him for six hits altogether and a total of two runs. The score was a tie when Mogridge entered the arena and one thing may be said for him. After the visitors had collected their runs in the eighth it was his hit that brought home the tying run in the ninth and prolonged the affair until it was mercifully stopped by darkness. The score:

PHILLIES COLLAPSE IN FIGHT FOR FLAG

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 3.—The Phils lost their fight for the pennant this afternoon when Boston trimmed them in a double-header, while the Dodgers clinched the 1916 title by beating the Giants on Ebbets Field. The double disaster puts the Moran men out of the pennant race. They are now two and a half games behind the Robins, and even if they won their two remaining games from Boston while the Dodgers drop two to McGraw's clan the Phillies could not supplant Brooklyn.

The Phils went to pieces in the closing innings of the second game just as they did in the first encounter, the score of the second game being 6 to 1 and that of the first game 6 to 3. It was a heartbreaking setback for the 15,000 fans who packed the stands and urged the Moran men on to another pennant.

Lefty Tyler and Erskine Mayer fought a pitchers' duel for seven innings in the second game, then Mayer was taken out to make way for a pinch hitter. Bender tried to pitch, but his efforts in the remaining innings were ludicrous. The crowd quit in disgust. Hundreds went home, while the others who lingered jeered the team which they had followed and encouraged all through the long pennant season. Boston scored four runs off the Chief in the eighth and filled the bases again in the ninth, but this time the Phils managed to retire the Braves without a run.

The Phillies' lone tally was a home run clout by George Whitted, the plucky fielder, who limped through the game with a sprained ankle. Whitted's hard slam slipped through Chappelle as he leaned over the left field wall and dropped among the bleacherites for a circuit drive.

This lead was maintained until the sixth inning. Mayer fanned the first two Braves, and then Wilhoit drove a hit to right. The ball bounded away from Whitted, and before the limping left fielder could retrieve it Wilhoit rested on third. Koney tapped the ball weakly to Niehoff, who made an inexcusable boot, and Wilhoit scored the tying run. The Braves put over their winning run in the seventh, although it was unearned. Egan slammed a double to left centre. Blackburn bunted toward third. Byrne came in fast, but his throw to first was wild. Luderus knocked down the ball, but could not hold it, and Egan scored the winning run all the way from second. Tyler held the Phils in check during the remaining innings, but the efforts of Chief Bender to hold the Braves in check were the essence of futility.

Up to the seventh inning it looked like a certain Philly victory, for Eppa Rixey had pitched artful ball. He had the opponents runless, although the smart work of his associates had cut off two possible tallies.

The Moran men had also put over a pair of runs that looked very big. But the Braves stormed the Virginian southpaw off the mound in the stretch inning, two doubles and a single being interlarded with bad blunders by Stock, Byrne, and Paskert to give the Stallings clan the five runs which spelled victory.

The team played like a bunch of Connie Mack's cast-off recruits. Rixey retired, and Mayer pitched out the inning. Kantlehner, the former Pittsburgh southpaw, worked in the eighth inning and yielded a run, and Oeschger went through the ninth unscathed.

Good work on the part of Moran's infield prevented an alien score in the first and third, when Stock, Niehoff, and Luderus executed fast double plays. Another great defensive feat cut down a Boston run in the fifth. Gowdy was on second and Rudolph on first by virtue of two singles with two out. Maranville lined a single to right. Gavvy took the ball on the first bounce and heaved it to the plate. Killifer took the throw, and, by a dive, nailed Gowdy four feet from the plate. Killifer turned a complete somersault, but kept his clutch on the ball.

The Phils put their first run over in the fourth inning. After Stock was retired Whitted singled to right and scampered to third on Cravath's ringing smash to the same territory. Luderus raised a short fly in the left field. Whitted took a desperate chance and bolted for the plate after the catch. Magee made a good throw home, but George slipped under Gowdy and scored.

A home run clout from the bat of Dode Paskert gave the Phillies their second tally in the fifth, the ball sailing over Sherwood Magee's head into the rooters. The third run was made in the eighth on two singles and an infield out. The scores:

SERIES OPENS AT BOSTON SATURDAY

Schedule of World's Series Prices.

First blood in the coming world's series will be drawn on Saturday at Braves Field, Boston.

The second game will be played there on Monday, and now that it is assured that Brooklyn will be the contending team with the Red Sox the third and fourth games will be played at Ebbets Field on next Tuesday and Wednesday. If a fifth game is necessary it will be played in Boston on Thursday, Oct. 12, and if a sixth is needed it will take place at Ebbets Field on Friday, Oct. 13.

These dates were set yesterday at a meeting of the National Commission, held at the Waldorf Astoria, after Charles H. Ebbets of Brooklyn and William F. Baker of Philadelphia had waived their right to the customary procedure of tossing a coin to decide in which city the initial game will be held. The National Commission figured the Philadelphia club in all of its plans, but the field was left alone to Brooklyn after the result of yesterday's games had been posted.

President Ebbets of Brooklyn gave up his chances of securing the first two games for his own grounds because it would be almost impossible for him to get things in shape there by Saturday to accommodate the great crowd that will undoubtedly witness the first two encounters. He had been wary of making any unnecessary preparations in connection with the world's series owing to the uncertainty of whether or not his team would figure in the contests.

Following the custom of last year, the teams will remain in Boston until the first two games scheduled there are played, no matter how long it takes. Rain or ties may keep the teams in Boston later than Monday, but if the two games are played according to schedule they will come to Ebbets Field on Tuesday. The same rule applies to the games on the Brooklyn grounds. Two complete games must be played there before the rivals again move on to Boston. In the event that a seventh game is necessary, the National Commission will decide by lot before the sixth game is contested, where it shall be played.

The umpires for the series were chosen last night. They are: American League, Dineen and Connolly; National League, O'Day and Harrison. While in Boston the commission will make its headquarters at the Copley Plaza Hotel, and in Brooklyn at the Hotel Bossert.

Braves Field has been rented from the Boston National League Club for $1,000 per day, and for the first two days the players of the rival clubs will have to pay 60 per cent. of this sum. The National Commission will pay 10 per cent. and the heads of the opposing clubs the remaining 30 per cent. The players will profit by this, however, for, owing to the limited capacity at Fenway Park, the American League headquarters, they will gain probably $20,000 or $30,000 by playing at Braves Field, where the capacity is more than 40,000.

Garry Herrmann of Cincinnati was in the chair when the meeting, which was originally announced for today, was called to order. Others present were Ban B. Johnson, President of the American League; John K. Tener, President of the National League; John Heydler, Secretary of the National League, who acted as temporary Secretary to the commission; J. J. Lannin, President of the Red Sox; Charles H. Ebbets, President of the Brooklyn Club, and William F. Baker, President of the Philadelphia Club.

J. G. Spink of St. Louis was appointed official scorer by the National Commission, and will be assisted by two scorers to be appointed one each by the Boston and Brooklyn Chapters of the Baseball Writers Association. D. Le Roy Reeves, private secretary of President Tener, will be the National League's business representative for the commission, and William Hartridge of Chicago, Ban Johnson's secretary, will represent the American League.

Chairman Herrmann announced that all the regulations relative to the world's series jointly enacted by the National and American Leagues and the detail rules adopted by the commission would apply to the coming games. He also warned the public against extortion and cautioned fans from paying extra prices for tickets. Mr. Herrmann asserted that the National Commission has been heartily assured of the co-operation of the authorities in the cities where the games will be held in the suppression of scalping.

The players eligible for the series, and no others will be permitted to play, as approved by the commission, are:

Boston—William F. Carrigan, manager; S. L. Agnew, John J. Barry, F. L. Cady, George Foster, Del Gainor, W. L. Gardner, A. Gregg, Olaf Henrikson, Hoblitzell, Harry B. Hooper, H. C. Janvrin, Sam P. Jones, H. B. Leonard, George E. Lewis, Carl W. Mays, M. J. McNally, George H. Ruth, Everett Scott, Ernest Shore, C. H. Shorten, C. D. Thomas, Charles Wagner, Clarence Walker, James Walsh, and J. W. Wyckoff.

Johnston, Otto Miller, Walter Mails, Harry H. Myers, Fred Merkle, Richard W. Marquard, J. T. Meyers, Harry H. ("Mike") Mowrey, I. M. Olson, Oliver O'Mara, E. J. Pfeffer, G. N. Rucker, Sherrod Smith, Charles D. Stengel, and Zack D. Wheat.

Gunboat Smith, the veteran California heavyweight, forced Joe Cox, the big Springfield, (Mo.) heavyweight, to extend himself to gain the honors in a ten-round bout at the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn last night. That is, concisely, the result of the venerable Gunner's efforts against the lumbering Missourian. Although the latter failed to display anything that would entitle him to consideration as a successor to Jess Willard, he was possessed of enough ability to defeat Smith by a safe margin.

The Californian at times made a commendable showing; at other times he was as wild as the proverbial March hare. In the early part of the contest he missed the majority of his attempts monotonously, while Cox countered cleverly and effectively, particularly to the stomach. In the three closing sessions Smith made a rally, but his efforts were delayed too long to prove effective. Smith weighed 177½ pounds, against 210½ pounds for Cox.

SOX PITCHERS BATTERED.

Ruth and Foster Hit Freely by Macks, Who Win Twice.

BOSTON, Oct. 3.—The Boston Americans closed the season, which has brought them another championship, with a session today in which the Athletics won two games. The scores were 5 to 3 and 7 to 5.

Supposedly tuning up for the world's series, Red Sox pitchers found their offerings freely hit by the lowly Athletics. Foster, who had not pitched previously for weeks, was hit exceptionally hard, seven hits for sixteen bases being counted against him in four innings. Ruth was almost similarly treated and Mays lacked his usual effectiveness.

With Brooklyn definitely chosen as the National League representative in the world's series, the Red Sox scouting forces will centre their attention on Brooklyn's play in the remaining league games with a view to strategical plotting. It was understood tonight that Carrigan, Wagner, and Barry would be in New York tomorrow for this purpose. The scores:

HAMILTON, N. Y., Oct. 3.—In spite of the fact that Colgate won last Saturday against Susquehanna, Coach Bankart is far from satisfied with the showing of the team. He has ordered the gates closed and the squad began work in secret. The team showed up especially weak in its offensive playing and lacked the speed and aggressiveness which it has shown in the past. In anticipation of the Maine game to be played in Utica next Saturday, Coach Bankart is drilling his men in new offensive signals. He has also reorganized his backs so that a new backfield combination will be used against the Maine team. The end positions continue to be unsettled, with Frye, Castlanos and Neilson the chief contenders for the position. It is very probable that Gillo, Colgate's star fullback, will be able to participate in Saturday's game. He has nearly recovered from his injuries which kept him out of the Susquehanna game.

Watt at Columbia Again.

Robert W. Watt, Captain of the Columbia baseball team last Spring during its best season in history, who signed with the Detroit American League club at the close of college, has re-entered the university to take graduate work for six months in the new school of business. Watt was loaned to the Newport News club in July, and as second baseman helped the club to finish in the lead. Next Spring he will report to the Chattanooga Club of the Southern Association.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

The Red Sox have looked a trifle superior to their opponents of the National League all through the dope, not in every position, but as a team, considering subs, regulars, and all, they are a better ball club and perhaps the best in the world. Yet not at one spot in the dope did they show enough superiority to overcome a run of luck or the breaks of the game until we reach the boxmen.

In pitchers, the Red Sox pile up a huge majority in the figures, and the dope shows clearly how they win and keep on winning. One has but to study the work of the pitchers to understand why the Bostons can play with such confidence. They outclass their National League rivals on the slab by a tremendous percentage. This explains, in great part, the confidence with which Carrigan's team tackles any opponent. What club would not be confident when it knows it possesses the attacking strength to score almost surely four runs per game, while it has the pitching power to hold opponents to an average of under two and a half?

In doping pitchers for an entire season we would be compelled, in order to ascertain the entire team strength, to study all the pitchers. But for the purposes of a series such as the coming one it is necessary to change that system somewhat. First, we must figure which pitchers are liable to be used.

Carrigan has five pitchers who can work in turn, if necessary, and it would be hard for him to make a blunder. His problem is the simple one of knowing which ones are in the best condition for that particular day.

Brooklyn Staff Weak in the Dope.

Brooklyn's pitchers, of course, make the worst sort of a showing against the Red Sox in the dope. You may set it down in the book now that the Red Sox will hit Brooklyn's pitchers with terrific force. Also you may rest assured that the Brooklyn aggregation will bat the great Red Sox pitchers. That team can hit. It is an erratic, uncertain and weird aggregation of ball players, but, when they start busting that pill they hold coroners' ceremonies on the pitcher.

The problem is the old one of finding twirlers who can stop a hitting crew. The Brooklyns, perhaps, would find one or more of Boston's pitching powers to their liking, but Carrigan's tremendous reserve strength enables him to change twirlers without weakening his team or hurting the confidence of his regulars. In other words, he can count on stopping batting rallies.

The Dodgers have perhaps the oddest pitching staff in the country, and their hope of beating the Red Sox will lie in three men—Jack Coombs, Big Pfeffer, and Rube Marquard. It would seem strange for Coombs to climax his comeback by defeating the team which he used to give such hard battles. I have been back over the records, and if Coombs is, as they claim, as good a pitcher as he was when he won pennants for Mack, he will give the Red Sox a terrific battle, even with the erratic and uncertain support of his panicky team. Marquard has shown magnificent stuff this season, and is one of the leaders in his league. His opponents have scored only about 1.7 runs a game off him, which indicates that he is far from all in. It is a saying in the American League that a good left-hander can stop the Red Sox.

Pfeffer Robbie's Chief Hope.

But Pfeffer, although he has been tagged pretty hard, is the best pitcher in the Brooklyn outfit. The Red Sox have not had a chance to study him much, and on those three twirlers Brooklyn's world's championship hopes rest. The others, save Harry Cheney, are scarcely worth observing, and the Red Sox have hit moist balls that make Cheney's look sick.

Now we must get down to the brass tacks. Naturally, it is no use studying pitchers unless they are going to work in the series. We must dope the twirlers, of course, in order to find out how strong each one is against every man on the opposing team. But to get at the result of a series we must figure which pitcher will work against which. This is what makes world's series doping so tough. If we knew now which pitchers would start against each other in every game, I'd take the laundry and butter money and get rich. It would be a cinch. The managers will not tell us. In fact, in such series it is the custom of wise managers to conceal their plans, not only to keep the opponents guessing, but also to head off the gamblers.

Brooklyn, to be consistent, will have to open with Pfeffer or Coombs. As to Carrigan's plan of compaign, it probably will be to open with Shore. We will study this to greater extent when we get closer to the day of the first game and will try, in a final struggle, to outguess the managers.

Tomorrow we take up the study of the teams beyond their mechanical strength—a study of the managers and of team spirit, which counts for much.

WOLVERINES PLAY TODAY.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 3.—With the exception of Boyd, the 192-pound guard, who is out of the game temporarily because of injuries, Coach Yost will use the best he has in the opening game with Marietta tomorrow. To last year's point-a-minute scoring machine, "Hurry Up" Yost, smiling this season for the first time in two years, has gone for three of the linemen who are sure to start with the Ohio team.

The campus is tonight manifesting more interest in the struggle than has been the case for years, not because Marietta is a team to be feared, but because tomorrow's team will probably be much the same as will be used all season. Captain Maulbetsch has recovered from the injuries he suffered last week, which threatened to keep him out of the contest, and will be seen at his old place at left half. Sparks, Maulbetsch, Pat Smith, and Sharpe will compose the backfield.

VOLGA'S HEELS RAP OUT NEW RECORD

LEXINGTON, Oct. 3.—Volga, full sister to Peter Volo, arose to share the latter's fame by making a new set of records for 3-year-old fillies in winning the 3-year-old trotting division of the Kentucky Futurity, valued at $14,000 and worth $8,500 to the winner, at the Kentucky Horse Breeders' Association meeting here today.

The daughter of Peter the Great and Vervolo Belle trotted the third mile in 2:04½, thereby lowering by a full second the 3-year-old filly record of 2:05½, made by Mary Putney in winning the Futurity last year. In addition, Volga trotted the three heats in 2:06½, 2:07 and 2:04½, respectively, establishing a new record for three heats for 3-year old fillies.

Volga's new mark of 2:04½ not only is a new record for 3-year-old fillies, but is ¼ of a second faster than the 4-year-old record for mares made by Joan in winning the Walnut Hall Cup seven years ago, and equaled by Mary Putney today.

The 3-year-old record for colts made by Volga's brother, Peter Volo, in winning the Futurity two years ago, is 2:03½. The corresponding records held by them are the first ever held by brother and sister in the 3-year-old division.

Mary Putney, in winning the first heat of the 2:06 trot, equaled the world's record for 4-year-old mares by trotting the mile in 2:04¾, which mark was set by Joan in 1909; but it was only a few minutes before Volga's remarkable mile dimmed the lustre of Mary Putney's time. Cox, who drove Mary Putney, had little trouble in winning the 2:06 trot, Ross B. taking second money and Esperanza third.

When we talk Youths' Suits, we refer to a type of garment which we design especially for youthful figures (sizes 32 to 35 chest)—

Five "youths'" models to choose from and all of them cut in "longs" and "shorts" as well as "regulars."

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 3.—Surprises marked the first round of match play in the women's national golf championship tournament over the links of the Belmont Springs Country Club today.

Mrs. J. V. Hurd who, as Miss Dorothy Campbell, held the American, the Canadian and the British championships, was eliminated by Mrs. T. Hucknall, of Forest Hill, 2 up, and this in spite of the fact that Mrs. Hurd was medalist in the qualifying round, leading the rest of the field yesterday by a clear four strokes at 86. Today she was nearer 96, and as a result of bad golf and bad luck, she was removed from further participation in the match play rounds.

Another upset was the defeat of Miss Marion Hollins, former Metropolitan champion, by another Metropolitan golfer, Mrs. Leila C. Stockton of Somerville, who won in decisive style by the margin of 2 up and 1 to play. The Somerville golfer, who was the medalist in the women's Metropolitan championship competition last Spring at Baltusrol, was playing a beautiful game, and playing out the eighteenth hole for the sake of her score, she took a 5 that gave her an 84 for the round.

This, however, was not the lowest score of the day by several strokes. Mrs. W. A. Gavin of Taconic, the little English woman who is the favorite for the title, eliminated Miss Georgianna M. Bishop of Brooklawn, former national champion, by the margin of 4 and 3, and in doing so she turned in a medal score of 81. This might easily have been several strokes lower, had not Miss Bishop laid her three stymies which she was unable to negotiate, and in addition to this handicap to the low score, she took a 6 on the home hole by missing an almost unmissable putt.

Miss Rosenthal Beats Miss Osgood.

Miss Elaine Rosenthal of Ravisloe, former Western champion, and another excellent golfer of the younger set, defeated Miss Fanny Osgood by 4 and 3, and dashed the hopes of Boston to the ground. Miss Osgood, who is a former national champion, was consistent in only one thing—her bad putting. On the qualifying day this faculty of missing the cup from all distances and angles nearly dropped her out of the list of qualifiers. The fatal fault cropped out again today, and as missing short putts in no part of a successful attack against the golf that Miss Rosenthal usually plays, Miss Osgood was an easy victim to the Westerner.

Miss Alexa Stirling of Atlanta, the young Southern champion, came through to a victory over Mrs. E. H. Baker, Jr., of Belmont Springs, by the score of 2 and 1, but Miss Stirling has not been playing up to her normal form in the last few days, and must improve if she is to reach the final round.

Mrs. Gavin is the only one of the four low score golfers in the qualifying round to remain in the tournament. After the posting of the defeat of the medalist, Mrs. Hurd, by Mrs. Hucknall, there came the defeat of Miss Bishop, who qualified with a 90, by Mrs. Gavin, and the defeat of Mrs. John H. Lapham of San Antonio, another 90 qualifier, by Mrs. G. Henry Stetson of Huntingdon Valley, who needed 96 strokes in the qualifying round. Some of the fair golfers are now convinced that it does not pay to use up all their good strokes in the qualifying round.

Great Round by Mrs. Gavin.

In defeating Miss Bishop Mrs. Gavin played a remarkable round of golf. An 81 by a woman over a 6,000-yard course is always creditable, and under the conditions at Belmont Springs it verges on the wonderful. It is true that the course is burned out and the ball gets a long roll, but the same conditions near, and even on the putting green, make approaching doubly hard and uncertain. Mrs. Gavin's play through the green was a delight to the eye. By some magic of her own invention she has added great distance to all her wooden shots, and at present she is far outdriving every other golfer in the tournament. Moreover, she is not content to hit anywhere in the general direction of the green, but is always aiming for the pin, and almost as often is headed straight for it.

In her match against Miss Bishop she was 41 to the turn with a stymie that was laid her on the third green, and she was back in 40, with two more stymies in her path, and with a 6 on the easy home hole. In addition to her score of 81, she gave the gallery more cause for applause by holing out two 2s, one on the 198-yard second hole with a three-foot putt, and the other on the 114-yard sixteenth hole with a four-foot putt, in playing out the bye holes.

After going into the lead at 1 up by getting a 2 on the second hole, Mrs. Gavin dropped back all square again on the third, where Miss Bishop drove her second shot through a trap and laid the English woman a stymie with her third. Mrs. Gavin found no easy way, either around, over or through her opponent's ball, and took a 5 to a 4 for Miss Bishop. The Brooklawn player should have won the long fourth hole, but her approach shot overran the green, and Mrs. Gavin, who was in a trap, got out well and won the hole with a 6. Both had trouble on the short fifth hole, but Mrs. Gavin helped herself to an extra putt and Miss Bishop squared the match again.

Mrs. Gavin Makes Turn 2 Up.

Mrs. Gavin reached the turn in 41 strokes and was 2 up on Miss Bishop through a visit to a trap by the Brooklawn player and a prolonged, fruitless fusillade of shots that Miss Bishop took at the pin on the eighth green in the hillside. Automobiles experience little difficulty in following the directions, "Ascend short, steep grade, straight ahead," but Miss Bishop is not an automobile, and her ascent of the short, steep grade was accomplished with a maximum of effort at the price of seven strokes for the hole.

She laid the Englishwoman a stymie on the tenth, reducing the lead to a single hole, but Mrs. Gavin regained her advantage on the next hole, 4—5. The Englishwoman had the advantage on almost every hole and was getting her scores with ease, while Miss Bishop was struggling to get down a putt for a half all the way.

The Brooklawn player flubbed her second on the way to the fourteenth green and became 3 down, and a few minutes later she was defeated 4 up and 3 to play on the fifteenth green, after she had made two successive poor shots on her journey toward the pin. The bye holes were played out for the sake of Mrs. Gavin's score, with the result that she turned in her 81 at the home green. Her card was as follows:

Out ....5 2 5 6 5 4 5 4 5—41
In ....5 4 4 5 5 4 2 5 6—40—81

Mrs. Stockton Plays Sterling Golf.

The match between Mrs. Stockton and Mrs. Hollins was chiefly remarkable for the fine golf played by the winner. Mrs. Stockton was even 4s on the first five holes and would have had another 4 on the sixth on any other course but the Belmont links. Her second shot on this hole was headed straight for the pin, but it hit the bank short of the green and turning swiftly to the left ran down a steep declivity into a trap. Even with this 6 and two more that she got on the seventh and eighth holes, she reached the turn in 43, 2 up on Miss Hollins.

The former metropolitan champion was playing fair golf up to the eighth hole but her shots were aimed in a variety of directions, a feature little calculated to improve her chances of remaining in the tournament. She had almost as much trouble as Miss Bishop in climbing the ascent to the eighth green and after three shots on the hillside she was just short of the edge of the green.

Mrs. Stockton was not much better, but she was just that one stroke better that meant another hole added to her lead, taking a 6 to a 7 for Miss Hollins.

Mrs. Stockton made it 3 up at the twelfth green by chipping from the edge and going down in one putt for a 4, but after she had lashed her second shot to the thirteenth green into a road, Miss Hollins by holding out in a single putt reduced the lead to its old figures of 2 up.

The former metropolitan champion made further inroads on the lead of Mrs. Stockton by winning the fifteenth hole in a most unorthodox manner. She sliced her drive so badly that with a fine long ball in the wrong direction she brought up on the wrong fairway. To reach the green she had to play over a rough stretch, a stone wall and a tree. She played over the rough and the stone wall, but she played through the tree so strenuously that she overran the green.

Tiny Putt Goes Astray.

Mrs. Stockton played into a trap by the green on her second shot, came out short, but pitched dead to the hole on her fourth shot. Miss Hollins chipped up and holed out in 5, and with a foot-long putt for a half Mrs. Stockton missed the cup and lost the hole.

The sixteenth was halved in 3, and then the players went on to the seventeenth, where Miss Hollins played into the water that was her Waterloo. Both got fine drives with Mrs. Stockton in a slightly better position. Miss Hollins played first, taking a midiron. The ball skipped along the fairway and plopped into a shallow ditch that crosses short of the green.

Mrs. Stockton took her brassie, hit just over the ditch and rolled onto the green within fifteen feet of the pin. In a do or die effort, and not wishing to lose a penalty stroke at that stage of the game, Miss Hollins waded into the water, standing over her shoe tops, and played out her ball which was three inches under water, with a tremendous splash that sprayed her from head to foot and sent the ball to the edge of the green. Her fourth she put dead to the hole, but all her efforts went for naught when Mrs. Stockton holed the fifteen-foot putt for a 3, a stroke under par, clinching the match by 2 up and 1 to play. Mrs. Stockton will encounter Mrs. Gavin tomorrow in the second round of match play.

Mrs. Hurd Fights to the End.

The medalist, Mrs. Hurd, put up a good struggle before succumbing to Mrs. Hucknall on the home green. The Forest Hill player led by 2 up at the turn and maintained her lead to the fourteenth hole. The fifteenth hole was taken by Mrs. Hurd after her opponent seemingly had it won, and the match was squared on the short sixteenth, where Mrs. Hucknall drove over the green and took a 5. Playing to the seventeenth Mrs. Hurd put her first shot out of bounds and her third shot hit in the water where Miss Hollins was wrecked, but bounced out again toward the green.

Mrs. Hucknall flubbed her shot so badly that she never even reached the water on her second, but she pitched to the green on her third, and was 1 up again with a 5. On the home green Mrs. Hurd had a putt for a 4 that would have squared the match. It was a hard putt—every putt at the Belmont Spring course is a hard one—and the former national champion knew that it was either a case of getting it or missing it by yards. She missed it, and ran past so far that she took a 6, but her match was lost by 2 up on the first missed putt.

None of the other matches produced anything remarkable. Miss Mildred Caverly of Philadelphia played very well against Miss Frances MacCarthy of Woodland, winning eventually by a wide margin. Miss Stirling played poorly, even if she did win, and Miss Osgood was eliminated because she failed to make proper use of her putter.

MRS. HOYT WINS TOURNEY.

Thirty-five women golfers teed up in the metropolitan one-day tournament which was held over the links of the Forest Hill Golf Club yesterday afternoon. In the field, in addition to the home players, were many representatives of various other clubs in this vicinity. Mrs. Ralph Hoyt won, with a card for the eighteen holes, handicap, of 103, 25—78. This was two strokes better than the net score of Mrs. F. T. Young, a clubmate, who received the same handicap and had a gross of 105.

Mrs. Cane, Arcola, 100, 18—82; Miss G. F. Wood, Englewood, 98, 11—87; Mrs. Waterhouse, 107, 17—90; Mrs. C. M. Dragg, 95, 2—93; Mrs. Nelsen, Hackensack, 101, 7—94; Miss Gertrude Tiutott, Forest Hills, 112, 18—94.

Mrs. Raven of New Brunswick captured the honors in the women's putting contest when she covered the eighteen holes in thirty-nine. The second honors went to Mrs. Brown, Haworth Country Club, who took forty strokes.

TIGER SCRIMMAGE ENDS IN DARKNESS

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 3.—A long drill in fundamentals and then an unusually hard scrimmage marked the Tiger practice today. Speedy Rush did not call a halt until darkness made it nearly impossible to see the ball. During the practice game several new plays were tried out by the coaches, and while they would not commit themselves, they were apparently satisfied with their experiments. Rush is still continuing his policy of having his men thoroughly grounded in the fundamentals before he attempts any work of a complex nature. He spent a great deal of time in drilling all the candidates in the various departments of the game, blocking and charging, covering punts and handling them at the receiving end.

George Funk, a former Lawrenceville player and Captain of the Freshman team last year, is now looming up as a probable man for one of the end positions. Wilson and Highley have had the call up to this time, but the new man gave an exhibition today which justified the coach's decision to shift him to the first team during the scrimmage. Funk has always played at centre, but he was started in at a wing position this Fall and immediately fitted in there.

TWO SHIFTS IN YALE LINE.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 3.—Two rush-line changes were made today by Head Coach Tad Jones of the Yale eleven, who installed Moseley at right end and Galt at right guard. Yale displayed weakness at both ends and at right guard against Carnegie last Saturday, and it is likely that Moseley and Galt will be tried out in these positions against Virginia next Saturday. Comerford, last year's freshman Captain, who started the Carnegie game at right end, was on the scrubs today, as was Zenner, who played right guard last Saturday.

Moseley was used at end in most of the games last year, although as reserve choice. Zenner and Galt were the freshman guards last season. Galt weighs 235 pounds. Captain Black, who turned his ankle last Saturday, has not since been in the line-up, Durfee again replacing him today.

For the first time this season the forward pass cropped out as a feature of the Yale attack, Art Gates, left end, sweeping over the goal line in the only score of the afternoon after taking a throw from Harry Legore. There were no long runs, but Bingham and Jacques were unstoppable in their line plunging for short gains.

A First Mortgage Public Utility Bond To Yield About 5¼%

First Mortgage Bonds of well-managed public utility companies are becoming more and more difficult to obtain at prices to yield over 5%. This is due to the fact that such bonds, owing to their enviable record for safety and general stability, appeal very strongly to those investors who aim to place their funds in security issues of permanent investment merit. We are now offering a 5% bond of this type, and shall be glad to send you detailed information upon request.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Million-share days on the Stock Exchange have become a matter of routine. Barring Saturdays, yesterday was the twentieth consecutive day on which the dealings exceeded one million shares. In an active market the dealings of floor traders add greatly to the total, but they alone do not make totals of the size of these. The continuation of dealings in this volume bespeaks the continued presence of the public in the market. Its presence is also indicated by the fact that the market has held so well despite the very large distribution of stocks which has been going on in recent days, distribution representing profit taking by many who bought at levels far under that which now prevails.

The market's resistance to this pressure is the more indicative of continued public support, inasmuch as this pressure has been accompanied by bear effort against the market in recent days, which has sought to change the market's hesitation into a pronounced decline. Relatively little success has attended this effort, and in yesterday's trading not a little of the buying consisted of the taking back of stocks by traders who sold short and had since been engaged in attempts to hasten prices downward. This buying back of stocks left the market somewhat more exposed to the effects of liquidation, but the public at large has not yet shown any sign of considering the recent market movement at an end. It is still confident.

In general terms, the monthly reviews of business conditions issued by the Federal Reserve banks throughout the country, and in specific terms, the Midvale Steel Company's statement issued yesterday, showing earnings at the rate of $2,500,000 a month and a very large increase in capacity, were illustrative of the sort of ground-work upon which this public confidence is based. And the annual statement of the New York Clearing House, showing an increase of more than 60 per cent. in the year's clearings, was suggestive of the enormous volume which trade and the banking transactions growing out of trade and speculation have attained. Never before was an increase comparable to this shown. This is typical of the experience through which American business has been passing, and which offers the explanation for the size and level which the stock market has reached, as it offers also the explanation of the extraordinary profits which are back of the demand for securities.

We have moved forward so rapidly this year that it is natural to question our ability to hold all the ground gained, of which some at least has come to us through the default of other countries. We will have to struggle to hold the progress which we have made, and it will take much foresight, much ingenuity, and much hard work to prevent the new high records which are now being made in every direction being succeeded by figures showing very large reductions. The task is probably not beyond accomplishment. It would be a pity to spoil the chance by reckless speculation, and this is as true of the stock market as it is of other parts of the business structure.

A Quick Appreciation.

As expected, the subscription books for the $50,000,000 City of Paris 6 per cent. bonds were closed yesterday morning, more than two hours ahead of time, and it was announced that the offering had been heavily oversubscribed. At the same time trading in the new bonds started vigorously on the Curb, where $200,000 worth changed hands on an advancing scale. From 98⅝, the offering price, the bonds sold up to 99⅝, an advance of a full point from the offering price and nearly three points above the figure at which the issue was taken by the bankers.

Managers of some of the commission houses have been warning their customers against placing orders at the market with the expectation of getting the price shown at the time on the ticker. The other machinery of trading on the Stock Exchange is capable of expansion to take care of big days, but the ticker can talk only so fast, and when the volume of dealings exceeds a million shares in five hours the machine lags behind the market. Especially in the last few minutes, when it frequently happens that a fresh burst of activity spreads through the list, the ticker is not a reliable guide to the conditions then prevailing on the floor. This is evidenced by the fact that quotations continue to pour forth sometimes for ten or twelve minutes after the gong has ended trading for the day. One big house wired all its branches yesterday a suggestion that customers be told to fix the price at which they wanted to buy or sell, unless they were willing to run the chance of getting a wide execution, and that they be advised against placing selling orders in a declining market. Some of the experiences suffered recently have almost paralleled those of the exciting time following the receipt of the Lusitania news.

Two Railroad Stocks.

In idle moments traders in stocks like to draw mental pictures of what they believe is happening among the issues they deal in. Of late much attention of this sort has been given Reading and Norfolk & Western, stocks which have displayed fairly consistent strength whatever the tendency has been in other directions. It is agreed, of course, that among railroad stocks these bear the right above many others of being classed as investments, both because of their earning power and dividends and the prospects which they hold for the future. Traders maintain that they are being accumulated steadily by persons of large means and by corporations, going away from the Street to stay. The Pennsylvania Railroad was a large owner of Norfolk & Western stock before the latter road began to show large earnings. There was a time when Delaware, Lackawanna & Western and Jersey Central were more popular with speculators than investors, but they went "into a bag" long years ago when their earning capacities became assured. The course of Reading and Norfolk & Western is likened to these issues when their strength is discussed.

Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie shares supplied a feature of the railroad list yesterday with a net gain of 5⅝ points, an exceptional advance for this rather inactive stock. The turnover in excess of 8,000 shares reflected buying which apparently had its roots in reported earnings at the rate of nearly 20 per cent. a year. There are long periods in which "Soo" lies dormant, and extensive speculative activity is rare. Yesterday's maximum quotation was the highest in nearly two years.

Double Par for Midvale.

It is on record that the high price for Midvale is 97½, but that record is a Curb record, and the reports of transactions are kept more carelessly on the Curb than on the Stock Exchange. The reporters of the Curb market miss all the sales made outside market hours, for it is tradition with them, as it is practice on the Stock Exchange, that the market closes at 3 o'clock. Stock Exchange houses are not supposed to do business in any security of their own after their market closes, but they trade outside in other things, and it is a fact that 1,000 shares of Midvale were sold at 100, or double par, on the afternoon it reached its high price of record. That stock, however, does not overhang the market. It was sold at a twelve-point loss, for which small loss the speculator has since been duly thankful.

International Mercantile Marine had a New Jersey charter, but had its main offices in New York, and so much of its treasury as was in this country was in New York. When bondholders first applied for a receiver they applied in New York, and took no thought of the company's relation to New Jersey. Only after the preferred stockholders contested the receivership did they obtain the appointment of a receiver across the river. That receiver, recipient of little or nothing, was discharged yesterday. The New York receiver has large sums in his possession, but not even he has any major portion of the earnings of the British subsidiary companies, which contribute about 75 per cent. of the earnings as of record on the books. So the Directors of the company are obliged to figure on bank loans to make up the money which must be paid to bondholders, and naturally continue in disagreement over ways and means of paying the 32 per cent. back dividends on the preferred stock.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE.

Many nervous changes took place in the market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. In the early dealings further distribution was reflected in some stocks, while others were bid up. United States Steel common reflected a degree of heaviness throughout the forenoon, but it rallied quite sharply in the early afternoon. In the final dealings, however, it again lost ground. A large and well distributed business in odd lots was handled by commission houses.

STEADIER TONE IN LONDON

But Decline in Investment Issues Has Not Yet Touched Bottom.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The decline in investment issues has not yet touched bottom, and owing to the superior attractions of the new 6 per cent. exchequer bonds, old stocks continue to sag, both consols and the British 4½ per cent. war loan losing 2 per cent. in a week, representing a large capital loss, although the yield is fractionally higher.

Most of the sections of the stock market were adversely influenced today, but a steadier tone developed near the close on a few purchases. The French loan was flat and it is expected the new issue will be offered here at about 80½. Japanese bonds and rubber and meat shares were firm. American securities showed little activity and closed undecided.

Money was in strong demand and discount rates were steady.

Prices Irregular on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—Prices were irregular on the bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 61f 90c for cash. Exchange on London, 27f 82½c. Five per cent. loan, 90f.

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 3.—Chancellor Walker in the Court of Chancery today dismissed the receiver for the International Mercantile Marine Company, a New Jersey corporation, which has been in the hands of Chauncey G. Parker of Newark, receiver. Mr. Parker presented to the Court affidavits that claims against the company had been paid or withdrawn. There was no opposition to the receiver's discharge.

GRANBY EARNINGS $9,299,337

Report Shows Gain of $5,113,000 in Mining Company's Profits.

The Granby Consolidated Mining Company reported yesterday gross receipts of $9,299,337 in the year ended June 30, a gain of $5,113,000 over the preceding year. The surplus for dividends amounted to $3,819,295, an increase of nearly $5,000,000, and the equivalent of 25.5 per cent. on the stock.

President W. H. Nichols said in the annual statement to stockholders that the assessment levied by the Canadian Government for the war tax was in process of adjustment. The Government's policy, he asserted, appeared to be to avoid making the tax burdensome. The company produced 42,198,083 pounds of copper, which were sold for 22.36 cents a pound, compared with 13.87 cents in 1915. Silver to the amount of 487,845 ounces was recovered, and 44,848 ounces of gold.

Bond, Payable in France, May Bought for Less Than $15.

Announcement is to be made soon by Brown Bros. & Co. and A. Iselin & Co. of a special and exclusive arrangement with the French Government under which the bankers will receive subscriptions in the United States for the new national French loan. The offering will afford the first opportunity for subscribing in this country to a French Government bond payable in francs, although the Farmers Loan and Trust Company has forwarded without charge subscriptions left there for this and the preceding loan.

The bonds will not be redeemed before 1931, insuring a security with a life of at least fifteen years. At the present rate of exchange the direct yield is more than 5.70 per cent. If exchange should return to normal this return will be increased to 6⅛ per cent. Francs are now selling at 5.85, as compared with the normal of 5.18. If a purchaser of the bonds under existing conditions is able to sell them subsequently with exchange back to normal he will get a profit of 14 per cent. The new bonds are to be offered in multiples of 100 francs, so that an American investor can buy a bond for less than $15.

The Problem of Estate Management for a relative or friend is often suddenly thrust on the individual executor who can ill afford to devote the necessary time from his own business. The logical thing to do is to appoint a trust company as Executor and Trustee of your estate. The Brooklyn Trust Company is daily handling the problems of estate management through a thoroughly organized department. Its fifty years of accumulated experience is at the service of its patrons.

Inquiries invited.

Brooklyn Trust Company
Chartered April 14, 1866
Member of the
New York Clearing House Association
177 Montague Street, Brooklyn
Bedford Branch — Fulton St. & Bedford Ave.
Manhattan Office — Wall St. & Broadway

The Union Trust Company of New York has leased for a term of years the banking floor of the Century Building adjoining its Main Office at 80 Broadway. The additional space is to be used by the Trust Department of the Company, but the entrance will be through the Company's own building.

The Growth of the Trust Department has been steady and consistent. In forty out of the fifty-one years since the company began business the aggregate amount of property held for personal trusts has shown increases, and since 1900 this aggregate has been more than tripled.

The fact that the Company is now caring for property for the third and fourth generations of those who originally entrusted their property to it clearly indicates satisfaction on the part of its clients.

Metropolitan Petroleum Corporation

This Corporation has acquired oil rights in approximately 323,000 acres in the best petroleum-producing fields of Mexico, and controls the most comprehensive concessions ever granted by Mexico for pipe line facilities and terminals.

Considering its low capitalization and superb management, we know of no oil stock which offers such prospects for substantial enhancement of value.

TENN. COPPER FINANCES.

Issue of 200,000 Shares to be Underwritten, One Suggestion Made.

Plans for additional financing for the Tennessee Copper Company are being worked out by a committee of Directors, including Richard Sutro, Horace M. Kilborn, Martin Vogel, and William B. Joyce. It was learned yesterday that one proposal included the issue of 200,000 shares of new stock, which would be underwritten, if the Board of Directors approved, and offered to present share owners for subscription. If this is carried out the company's outstanding stock will be doubled.

Directors of the company yesterday declined to comment on the measures under discussion, saying that anything said at this time might later be proved premature by changes in the plans. The Street heard that the stock might be underwritten at $15 a share, which would assure the company of $3,000,000 cash.

The company met with a severe setback last Autumn, when a plant in course of construction for the manufacture of trinitrotoluol was burned. A heavy investment had been made in materials for a big Russian order for the explosive before the fire, tying up a large part of the company's funds. Directors voice confidence that the concern can be put on a sound financial basis with moderate new financing, inasmuch as earnings from its copper production are increasing.

COTTON IRREGULAR; NET GAIN IS SMALL

LIVERPOOL CABLES BULLISH

Shortage of Supply Is Felt in Europe and Cold Weather Is Feared in South.

As was to be expected after the sensational advance on Monday, the cotton market yesterday developed considerable irregularity, with trading largely devoted to in-and-out operations of scalping operators who were trying to catch quick turns. There was no sign of weakness at any time, although prices moved uncertainly. At one time the market got to about 20 points above Monday's closing level, but final prices showed a net gain of only 5 to 9 points. The opening was unsettled at an advance of 8 points to a decline of 3 points.

Liverpool showed no definite trend, and local reactionists thought they saw signs of a disposition to wait and see what effect the new high prices would have on Southern holders. Toward noon there was renewed buying for the account of the trade. Spot markets showed strength, and hedge selling was small. Liverpool advices generally inclined to the view that there would not be enough cotton to go around.

The weather was hardly a feature yesterday. The forecasts developed nothing alarming, although some of the map readers predicted unsettled conditions with rain or snow in the Western cotton belt in the near future.

NORTHERN PACIFIC REPORT.

The Northern Pacific Railway's pamphlet report for the year ended June 30 showed gross operating revenue amounting to $75,939,230, against $63,171,652 the year before. Net income totaled $35,572,818, against $26,063,603 in 1915. After adding $8,479,258 as earnings from other sources and deducting $13,242,574 for interest and miscellaneous expenses, the amount left for dividends was $25,729,873, compared with $18,822,820 in the preceding twelve months. Revenue from freight was $55,656,395, an increase of $11,822,758 over 1915.

"The large increase in freight earnings," the report added, "was due to the general prosperity of the country tributary to our lines, due to record crops and the consequent money return to the producers in practically all of such territory. The prices received by the growers were better than they have enjoyed for some time, and we handled during the crop year, July 31, 1915, to Aug. 1, 1916, 87,371 cars of grain, as compared with 64,039 cars for the previous year.

"There was also great activity in the mining interests in our country. While the mining and lumber interests are still very active and prosperous, the grain crops for the coming season will not be as satisfactory as for the years just closed, and it is feared that the effect on business in the coming year will be quite pronounced."

WHEAT.

Further bullish advices from Argentina sent wheat prices up about 3 cents per bushel and to new high records for the entire season. In the local cash market No. 1 durum was quoted at $1.85½; No. 2 hard, $1.76¼; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, $1.88; No. 1 Northern, Manitoba, $1.84¾, all free on board New York.

PROVISIONS.

A further decline in the market for live hogs caused weakness throughout the provision list early in the day, but subsequently there was a partial rally in sympathy with the strength in grain. Price changes were irregular, and the undertone of hogs at the market was unsettled. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 22,000, estimated for Wednesday 30,000. Kansas City received 20,000 and Omaha 6,000.

The coffee market was quiet yesterday, prices again showing a tendency to sag off under moderate offerings. March sold off to $8.69, or within 2 points of the low level reached on the decline of last week, and about 25 points under the best point touched on the more recent rally. Closing prices were the lowest of the day, showing a net loss of 4 to 10 points, with sales reported of 36,250 bags. The local spot market was dull and unchanged at 9¼c for Rio 7s and 11¼c for Santos 4s. Range of prices:

The local market for refined sugar was firm, with two of the leading refiners advancing prices. There was a pretty good business reported, although the demand seemed to be for nearby requirement only. Prices were listed on the basis of 7.00c for fine granulated, by all refiners. The market for raw sugar held firm for prompt shipments, but there developed a little easier tone for straight October shipment and later positions, refiners only showing an interest in nearby lots. Quotations: Centrifugals, 6.02c; Molasses, 5.12c; cost and freight, 5c.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 14,787 packages. The market developed added strength on nearly all classes of stock. Trade only fair for the day, but receipts are coming in slowly and the market is lightly supplied with some qualities. The Exchange transactions included 386 tubs creamery extras at 38c; 90 tubs, 93 score, at 36¾c; 64 tubs, 93 score, at 37c. These figures were about in line with the business on the street. More doing in held creamery and feeling decidedly firm. Renovated a little stronger, and ladles and packing stock are gaining strength. Creamery, higher scoring than extras, per pound, 36½@37c; extras, 92 score, 36c; firsts, 88 to 91 score, 34½@35½c; seconds, 83 to 87 score, 33@34c; thirds, 31½@32½c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 37½@38c; extras, 36½@37c; firsts, 35@36c; seconds, 33½@34½c; creamery, held, higher than extras, 35¼@35½c; extras, 34¾@35c; firsts, 34@34½c; seconds, 33@33½c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 35c; good to prime, 32½@34½c; common to fair, 28½@32c; renovated, extras, 31½c; firsts, 30@31c; lower grades, 28½@29½c; imitation creamery, firsts, 30½@31c; ladles, June make, firsts, 30@30½c; current make, firsts, 29½@30c; seconds, 29c; lower grades, 27½@28½c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 28½@29c; No. 2, 28c; lower grades, 26@27½c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 13,976 cases. There is continued liberal offering of fresh gathered eggs, but the demand is only moderate and of a selective character. The high qualities are meeting a fair call, and are rated steady to firm, but medium and lower grades are dragging, and receivers are unable to reduce recent accumulations. Values continue irregular and show little change. Storage eggs in fair demand and held firmly. Nearby white eggs are in lighter supply and strictly fancy new-laid qualities are very scarce; some sales of such are reported at a further advance; medium and ordinary qualities cleaning up rather better. Fresh gathered, extra fine, per dozen, 38@39c; extra firsts, 36@37c; firsts, 33@35c; seconds, 30@32c; thirds and poorer, 27@29c; dirties, No. 1, 28@28½c; No. 2 and poorer, 25@27c; checks, good to choice, dry, 26c; undergrades, 23@25c; refrigerator special marks, fancy, storage and insurance paid, 31@31½c; firsts, 30@30½c; seconds, 28@29½c; lower grades, 26@27½c; refrigerator, State whites, 32@33c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby, hennery whites, fine to fancy, 46@52c; ordinary to good, 36@45c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 35@45c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 32@38c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby, hennery browns, 40@44c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 33@38c.

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday..3½@4 per cent. for the best names
Monday....3½@4 " " " " "

Crude Rubber Market Quiet.

The crude rubber market is quiet, but steady. The business that is passing is of a retail nature. Prices quoted yesterday were as follows: Up river, spot, 72½ cents; November, December, delivery, 68 cents; December, January delivery, 67½ cents; up river coarse, spot, 43 cents, forward delivery about the same; up river, caucho ball, spot, 44 cents, forward delivery 43½ cents; latex strip 60 cents; and smoked sheets 59½ cents.

Demand Is For Fancy Ribbons.

While business with some ribbon houses is reported a trifle dull, makers of cheap fancy goods are doing unusually well. One representative house is sold up for the season on all but a few grades. Fancies are said to have had 60 per cent. of the call. The experience of this concern is generally a forerunner of what the general market can expect. Velvets, it is said, give evidence of being popular for the Spring in the narrow widths below No. 9. The wider goods have been carried over.

A New Comfortable High Collar.

The vogue for the high collar should receive some impetus from a new type which will soon be put on the market by a leading factor in the trade. The special feature of the design is the form fitting shape of the band and the top. They curve to fit over the bones and muscles of the shoulder. In this way the cutting of the collar into the neck, a disagreeable feature of the high collar, is eliminated. The design is patented and will be sold in two styles, a straight and a rounded front.

Bringing Record Prices.

Large sales have been made during the last two days on narrow printcloths on the basis of 39 cents a pound. This is the highest price paid for such goods since the civil war. Going back to the time when cotton was practically unobtainable in the North—it brought as much as $1.90 a pound in 1864—printcloths of the sort described have not reached so high a figure as they have today. In 1907 the nearest approach was made to the present record price. Narrow goods sold then on a basis of 36 cents a pound.

Variety in Hat Ornaments

Jeweled metal is the latest thing in ornaments for hats that has come in to the big dealers. Jewels of different colors are set in metals of fancy shapes and styles. Another of the best and latest things is the Cashmere colors, which come in beads and different materials, frequently surrounded with fur or with a metal setting. The green and blue of the Impeyan pheasant make some of the most attractive hat ornaments. They are combined with fur, making in some instances rosette effects. The fur may be mole, seal, or a line of the fringelike genet. This has been the biggest year for jet ornaments that has been known for a long time.

Silk on Wave of Prosperity.

The amount of orders coming in for next Spring's silks is astonishing to manufacturers in this trade who have known even the most successful seasons. In one case a firm has booked more orders in two weeks' time than it has been accustomed in the past to take in a full three months' period. The question of recalling salesmen is now under consideration, and such action may be taken, although the roadmen have not been given an opportunity to cover their territories. Allotments to customers on the basis of past business is something that may be adopted in the event that the supply does not come up to the needs of the trade.

To Take Up Merger Plan.

Committees were announced yesterday at a meeting of the Directors of the Clothiers Association of New York, which will take up the preliminary plans for effecting an amalgamation of the various associations of manufacturers in this market. The Clothiers' Association appointed William Goldman, Norbert D. Light and Charles W. Endel as its committee. The American Association committee consists of Max H. Friedman, Samuel Rosenthal and Herbert C. Ansorge. The association of Boys Clothing Manufacturers in New York appointed Louis Jaffee, Mark Abrahams and Joseph Skolny. These committees will confer shortly. The Directors of the Clothiers Association elected five new firms to membership.

Public Buying Better Shoes.

The Fall shoe business is now on in earnest. The way people are buying and the prices they are willing to pay, says a bulletin issued by a representative firm, show they are fairly well educated along the line of buying good shoes at the present advanced prices. Even some of the very small dealers, who always sold only cheap shoes, now complain of losing sales because their stock is not good enough to satisfy the demand. Women's low-heel shoes made on modern narrow-toe lasts and of the new materials are shown in all the representative stores. The narrower toes with low heels are expected to become popular. Black shoe laces are now used on gray-top shoes for both men and women. They are said to form a pleasing contrast and do away with mismatched shades.

Gray Goods Hard to Get.

It is much easier to sell than to buy gray goods under the ruling conditions of the market. Many of the mills have withdrawn prices and bids are accepted only on approval. Under such circumstances trade is quite difficult. There were sales yesterday of 64-60s, 38½-inch, for January, February, and March delivery at 7 cents. Transactions were also reported on 60-52s for October, November, and December at 6¼ cents. Other sales were made on 56-60s, 4-yard sheetings at 8 cents. So far no sub-count business has developed to speak of, although this is regarded as the logical outcome of the present advancing market. Closing prices were as follows:

39-inch, 80-80s	*9¼c	38½-inch, 64-60s	7c

Situation in the Coal Trade.

The Coal Trade Journal will say today that, contrary to all traditions, the approach of cold weather is a source of worriment to all connected with the anthracite trade except the speculative element, which controls only a very small percentage of the total tonnage. Retailers know that their troubles will be multiplied and their profits curtailed by inability to get full supplies when the season is a little further advanced. Shippers realize that the pressure will become more acute, without any benefits in the way of higher prices on the bulk of the shipments. In regard to bituminous coal, the steady upward movement of prices continues. The advance since the end of August has already amounted to over a dollar a ton, and coal is selling within fifty cents of the figures realized at the height of last Winter's boom. Some operators are, with seeming confidence, predicting $5 coal before Christmas. Most operators are behind on their contracts and have nothing for sale, while those with tonnage to offer are disposing of it from day to day.

So-called crackers or snappers made of crepe, tissue and ordinary paper are not to be regarded as "toys" within the meaning of the tariff act, according to a decision handed down yesterday by the Board of General Appraisers in the protest case of R. U. Delaphenha & Co. Judge Sullivan decided that the goods were properly dutiable as claimed by the importers at 30 per cent. as manufactures in chief value of crepe paper. The Collector was reversed in taking 35 per cent. duty under the toy schedule.

F. B. Vandegrift & Co., Philadelphia, protested the Collector's assessment on oil claimed to be used for leather dressing. The Collector took duty at 20 per cent. as a combination of distilled oils. The testimony showed that the product was used exclusively for the purpose claimed. Judge McClelland accordingly sustained the protest, with an order for reliquidation.

The Government lost in a controversy with T. W. Thayer & Co., who made an importation of birch lumber which the Appraiser stated in his return was sawed into strips one and three-quarters wide and planed on two sides. The Collector held the merchandise to be "manufactures of wood" and took duty at 15 per cent. Judge McClelland decided that free entry accrued as "sawed lumber."

Judge Brown made a reappraisement decision involving quicksilver shipped to New York importers by Bonifacio Lopez & Co., Bilbao, Spain, in which it was held that the customs officials erred in raising prices to make what they deemed proper foreign market value. The quicksilver was entered as having a value in Bilbao at the date of shipment of $130 per flask. Judge Brown accepted this value and reversed the appraising officials.

The same General Appraiser, also in a reappraisement proceeding, held that a discount of 8 per cent. could not be allowed on wool cloth shipped here by Andrew Wray, Londonderry, Ireland. The merchandise was entered here as worth 4s 8d per yard, with a deduction of 8 per cent. discount. The entered value of the cloth itself was not disputed. Judge Brown concluded that the inclusion of the discount in the dutiable value was proper under the circumstances, and affirmed the Appraiser.

Tin plates entered by importers at Albany, and manufactured by Charles Hatton & Co., London, were heavily advanced in a reappraisement made by Judge Fischer. The goods arrived at Albany July 15 last. Their entered value was set down at £38, while the General Appraiser approved the taking of duty on the basis of £46.

BUSINESS NOTES.

At a meeting yesterday, sums were voted to the following institutions: New York Committee on the Aftercare of Infantile Paralysis Cases, $2,500; Dispensary and Hospital for Deformities and Joint Diseases, $1,000; St. John's Guild, $500; New York Hospital, $500. The committee is anxious to receive further contributions.

Following a meeting of the Silk Industry Home Defense League in the rooms of the Silk Association of America yesterday, a squad of eight members went to the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory for target practice.

has been brought up to its present high standard of efficiency by twenty-seven years' study of the cold facts of real estate ownership and management and by making each man in the organization fit into his niche. Service night and day in the office and out, whether "on duty" or "at rest" is the twenty-four-hour thought of each. This is loyalty to their organization and its clients and loyalty is the yard-stick by which we are willing to be measured. Bring on your yard-stick!

THE REAL ESTATE FIELD.

William Ziegler Buys $1,000,000 Park Avenue Apartment at Fifty-eighth Street—W. K. Vanderbilt Buyer of M. F. Plant House—Lower Fifth Avenue Deal—Big Farm Sale at Jericho, L. I.

More than usual activity characterized the realty market yesterday. In addition to a $1,000,000 apartment sale on Park Avenue and the purchase of an apartment on lower Fifth Avenue at Eleventh Street assessed at $450,000, it was ascertained that the former Morton F. Plant home on the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Fifty-second Street has been purchased by William K. Vanderbilt and leased to Cartier, the jeweler, now at 712 Fifth Avenue, for about $50,000 a year. Clifford Van Schurman, who represented Mr. Plant in the latter's purchase of a new home site on upper Fifth Avenue some time ago, refused to confirm the facts of the purchase and lease.

The Park Avenue deal involved the purchase by William Ziegler of the new thirteen-story apartment on the southwest corner of Park Avenue and Fifty-eighth Street, covering a plot 100.5 by 100.3. It was bought from the 600 Park Avenue Company, composed of Samuel A. Herzog and Edgar A. Levy. The house is fully rented and has been held at $1,100,000. It shows a rent roll of $125,000 a year, having been completed for occupancy on the first of this month. It was designed by the architects, Schwartz & Gross, at an estimated cost of $420,000.

In part payment Mr. Ziegler gave to the sellers the six-story apartment known as the Kendall, at 517 to 523 West 111th Street, 100 by 100.11, valued at $210,000, and the five-story house at 60 Northern Avenue, southwest corner of 180th Street, 100 by 78, valued at $125,000.

The deal was closed through J. Curry Watson and Jesse C. Bennett as brokers.

It was purchased by David H. Knott, who controls several apartment hotels in the Washington Square locality, including the Holley, the Earle, and the Judson on the square, the Berkeley at Ninth Street and Fifth Avenue, and the Van Rensselaer in Eleventh Street, just east of his recent purchase.

The property was bought from the Birport Realty Company. The house was built about a dozen years ago. It will be altered by the new owner and will be conducted as a high-class apartment hotel. It is opposite the old First Presbyterian Church. The property was assessed this year at $450,000. Mark Rafalsky & Co. were the brokers in the transaction and they will act as agents of the house for the new owner.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The South Atlantic disturbance noted Monday night is now apparently some distance off the Georgia Coast, attended by northerly gales, but as yet with only strong north winds on the coast. Storm warnings have been continued from Fort Monroe to Charleston and extended to Savannah.

No precipitation of consequence occurred east of the Mississippi River, and none in the Lower Missouri Valley and the Southwest, but in the Northwest and extreme West rain and snow continued under the influence of the low pressure system that has prevailed generally throughout the West for the last few days, although now with a rapidly rising tendency.

Abnormally high temperatures prevailed Tuesday in the Missouri and Upper Mississippi Valleys, the upper lake region, the Central Plains States, and the Southwest, while further to the westward they remain abnormally low, ranging from 10 to 33 degrees below the seasonal average. In the East and South temperatures are more nearly normal.

Rain will fall Wednesday in the South Atlantic States except Florida, Wednesday or Wednesday night and probably Thursday in the Middle Atlantic States, and on Thursday in Southern New England and the upper lake region. In the lower lake region, the Ohio Valley, Tennessee, and the East Gulf States fair weather will prevail Wednesday and Thursday.

No temperature changes of consequence will be noted until Thursday, when it will be colder in the upper lake region, the lower Ohio Valley, and Western Tennessee.

Winds for Wednesday and Thursday along the North Atlantic Coast will be moderate, mostly northeast, and partly cloudy weather Wednesday; Middle Atlantic Coast, moderate northeast, probably increasing Wednesday night, weather becoming unsettled; South Atlantic States, strong northeast, probably gales, with rain, winds diminishing Thursday.

FORECAST TODAY AND THURSDAY.

Southern New England—Partly cloudy Wednesday, Thursday probably rain.

New Jersey—Occasional rain Wednesday or Wednesday night and probably Thursday.

Western New York—Fair Wednesday and probably Thursday; little change in temperature.

Eastern Pennsylvania—Cloudy Wednesday; probably rain at night and Thursday.

GOVERNMENT SELLS BONDS AT HIGH RATE

AWARDS TO OHIO CONCERNS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Bids were opened and awards made at the Bureau of Insular Affairs today for bonds of the Government of the Philippine Islands of the face value of $4,000,000, to be known as Philippine Government 4 per cent. gold bonds of 1916-1946, and also for 4 per cent. gold bonds of 1916 of Porto Rico, aggregating $700,000, to be issued under authority of the Government of Porto Rico.

The National City Company of New York was the highest bidder for the Philippine bonds. The entire issue, $4,000,000, was awarded to the National City at 100.76, to be paid Oct. 10, the interest on the bonds to begin Dec. 1, which is equivalent to a bid of 1.0132 and accrued interest.

Two Ohio firms got the entire lot of Porto Rican bonds after their bids had been considered in competition with Eastern banking concerns. The award of these was announced by General McIntyre, Chief of the Bureau of Insular Affairs, as follows:

"Of the $700,000 Porto Rican 4 per cent. bonds offered, there were awarded to Seasongood & Mayer of Cincinnati, Ohio, $425,000 public improvement bonds at 1.02622, and to the Ohio National Bank of Columbus, Ohio, $25,000 of series C, redeemable 1929, at 1.02682, and $50,000 series D, due 1930, at 1.0315. There were awarded to Seasongood & Mayer $175,000 of the irrigation refunding bonds at 1.046055, and to the Ohio National Bank of Columbus, Ohio, $25,000 of series I, redeemable 1959, at 1.05385."

Officials of the Insular Bureau expressed themselves as gratified at the offers received and interpreted the high prices offered for the bonds, especially in view of the war in Europe, as indicating high confidence in the stability of the Philippine and Porto Rican Governments.

The Philippine bonds are issued in accordance with an act of the Philippine Legislature passed Feb. 4 last and the Philippine Government bill of Aug. 29 last. In asking for bids, the War Department announced that the United States Treasury Department authorized the statement that it would accept these bonds at par as security for public deposits, should further deposits be made, and the Postmaster General authorized the statement that they would be accepted at par as security for deposits of postal savings funds. The bonds will also be accepted at par by the Government of the Philippine Islands for deposits of funds of that Government.

The legality of the issue has been passed on by the Attorney General. The bonds are to be issued in registered form and in denominations of $1,000 and $10,000, dated Dec. 1, 1916, and to bear interest from that date at 4 per cent. annually. They are redeemable by the Philippine Government after ten years and payable in thirty years after date of issue in United States gold coin. The total revenues of the Philippine Government for the period from the date of American occupation, Aug. 18, 1898, to Dec. 31, 1915, were $191,997,465.47, and the total expenditures during that period were $186,587,803.06.

In addition to the bid of the National City Company of New York for the entire issue of Philippine bonds at 100.76, a joint bid of 101.31 for the first $1,000,000, of 101.08 for the second $1,000,000, of 100.68 for the third $1,000,000, and 100.38 for the fourth $1,000,000 was submitted by Reed, Elliott and Harrison, W. R. Compton and Company and Kissel, Kinnicutt and Company. The average of these bids was slightly lower than that the National City Company for the whole issue. The bid of the Fletcher American National Bank of Indianapolis was 100.80, and, while on its face this was the highest bid, when subtractions were made for arbitrage, the bid figured out 100.36. William E. Lauer & Co. of New York put in a bid of 103.50 and accrued interest for $25,000 of the bonds. The Mercantile Trust Company of St. Louis filed a bid of 100.59 for $1,000,000.

Exemption from Certain Taxes.

The advertisement for the Porto Rican bonds called for bids on Lot A for $200,000 of irrigation refunding bonds and on Lot B for $500,000 public improvement bonds, issued under the Porto Rico Civil Government act passed by the United States Congress on April 12, 1900, and in accordance with the authority of the Legislative Assembly of Porto Rico. These bonds are not subject to the Federal income tax imposed by the law of 1913, and, according to a recent decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Farmers and Mechanics' Savings Bank case, "they apparently are exempted from taxation by the States."

The bonds are to be issued in denominations of $1,000 and $5,000, registered, dated Jan. 1, 1916, and will bear interest at 4 per cent. from July 1, 1916. They will mature as follows: Lot A, $200,000 irrigation refunding bonds, Series I, $100,000 to mature Jan. 1, 1959; Series J, $100,000, to mature Jan. 1, 1960; Lot B, $500,000 public improvement bonds, Series A, $100,000, to mature Jan. 1, 1927; Series B, $100,000, to mature Jan. 1, 1928; Series C, $150,000, to mature Jan. 1, 1929, and Series D, $150,000, to mature Jan. 1, 1930.

When the bids on these bonds were opened it was found that Seasongood & Mayer had offered to buy all or any part of the $500,000 issue of public improvement bonds at par and accrued interest, offering a premium of $13,111, and that the same firm offered to buy all or part of the $200,000 irrigation refunding bond issue at par and accrued interest, with a premium of $9,211. The National Park Bank of New York offered to take $100,000 of the bonds at par and accrued interest. C. F. Childs & Co. offered for the entire amount a premium of $15,890, making its premium rate 102.37. The bid of Gavin L. Payne of New York on $100,000 was 103. W. R. Compton & Co. of New York submitted bids of 101.313, 101.332, 100.128, 100.404, 100.467, and 100.527 for the bonds in lots of $100,000 each. The Ohio National Bank of Columbus offered to take part of the bond issue at the figures at which it was awarded $25,000 of Series C, $50,000 of Series D, and $25,000 of Series I.

Other bids were: Stacy & Braun of New York, offering to take the entire issue at 102.80; Lawrence, Turner & Co. of New York, $100,000 at 101.25; H. Rollins & Son of New York, $100,000 at 100.868 and accrued interest; Mercantile Trust Company of St. Louis, $500,000 at 1012.80 per $1,000 worth of the bonds; W. P. Crowell & Co. of New York, 102.76 for all or part of the $200,000 irrigation refunding bond issue, also offering 102.76 for all or part of the $500,000 public improvement bonds; William E. Lauer & Co. of New York, 104 and accrued interest for $25,000 of Series J of the $200,000 irrigation bond issue; Crane, Parris & Co. of Washington, who offered to take the entire lot at 97.744, the only bid below par received on either issue; Fletcher American National Bank of Indianapolis, 103.338 and accrued interest for the $200,000 issue and 101.42 and accrued interest for the $500,000 public improvement issue; Folsom & Adams of New York, who offered to take the entire issue at a premium rate of 103.076.

MIDVALE CO. EARNS $2,500,000 A MONTH

NEW PLANTS READY JAN. 1

Prediction Made That Coming Year Will Be Even More Profitable for the Company.

Stockholders of the new Midvale Steel and Ordnance Company learned at their first annual meeting yesterday that earnings in excess of 30 per cent. on the stock were coming in, exclusive of profits from a contract for 3,000,000 rifles for the British Government. This information was included in a statement presented in behalf of President William E. Corey, who was away on a hunting trip in the West. The statement said:

> From the standpoint of our company, business conditions are entirely satisfactory. All of our plants are operating to full capacity and orders are being received in excess of shipments. Net earnings, leaving entirely out of consideration the manufacture of rifles by the Remington Arms Company under its contract with the British Government, since the acquisition of Cambria Steel Company in February, are in access of $2,500,000 per month.
> During the past year additions to our plants have been under construction and will be completed by Jan. 1, 1917, resulting in a total increased production of 1,000 tons of pig iron and 1,200 tons of open hearth steel per day.

Vice President William B. Dickson, who presided at the meeting in Mr. Corey's absence, said the statement covered all the information available at this time, and the assembled shareholders appeared to be entirely satisfied with the progress made by the management, which has been in control less than a year.

The number of shares of stock represented was 1,219,264, out of 2,000,000 shares outstanding. The shareholders elected these directors to serve for three years: Samuel M. Vauclain, A. C. Dinkey, W. P. Barba, Frederic W. Allen and John C. Neale.

The Midvale Steel and Ordnance Company is made up of the Midvale Steel Company, the Cambria Steel Company, the Remington Arms Company of Delaware, Worth Brothers, and the Coatesville Rolling Mill Company. Before additions referred to in Mr. Corey's statement were undertaken the combined plant capacity was in excess of 7,000,000 tons of iron and steel. When the new facilities are completed the concern will be able to increase the annual output by 800,000 tons. In view of this preparation for greater business, and the announcement that orders were constantly exceeding shipments, the shareholders feel that the ensuing year will bring a substantial increase of profits over the current rate of $30,000,000 annually.

When the Midvale absorbed the Remington Company it was reported that the profit from the rifle order would be in the neighborhood of $20,000,000. The Cambria Steel Company is, however, the leading unit for producing profits, as the net income estimated for 1916 is put at $20,000,000 or more. The Midvale organization is second only to the Steel Corporation in diversification of products and capacity. It makes steel products ranging from armor plate to steel tubing, and stands in an especially strong strategic position as regards the ship plate business in the four big plate mills owned by the Worth Brothers Company.

Intervenes in Ohio Copper Co. Suit.

The International and Intercontinental Mining and Refining Corporation obtained permission from Judge Manton in the Federal District Court yesterday to intervene in the proceedings to set aside the foreclosure and sale of the property of the Ohio Copper Mining Company, which was adjudicated a bankrupt and sold to a reorganization committee. The International Company, which owns 9,000 shares of the Ohio Company, contends that all debts could be paid if the trustees of the Ohio Company would assess the stock $2 a share, making the total cost per share $5.

A BIT of HISTORY

50-52 WALL STREET.

128 BROADWAY THE BANK'S PRESENT HOME

The American Exchange Bank received its charter on September 14, 1838. At a meeting of its board of directors held February 20, 1839, this resolution was adopted:

"That this Bank will be open at No. 18 Wall Street on Thursday, February 21, 1839, at ten o'clock A.M., to receive deposits, and that on Saturday, February 23, 1839, at ten o'clock A.M., the board will proceed to discount."

The new bank met with success, finding it necessary, after three years, to secure larger quarters. On June 29, 1842, it moved to 50-52 Wall Street.

In 1852 the American Exchange Bank together with four other banks formed an association which led later to the organizing of the New York Clearing House.

A great panic swept the country in 1857, causing such financial stress that many banks suspended specie payments. The American Exchange Bank withstood the storm and not only met its obligations, but continued the payment of dividends. The excitement reached its height on October 14, 1857, on which day Mr. David Leavitt, former president and a director, spoke from the steps of the bank to the assembled crowd, advising them of the soundness of his bank.

In August, 1858, the bank moved to its new building at the corner of Broadway and Cedar Street, where it has since conducted business.

A gathering of historical interest was held in the new building in June, 1861. Secretary of the Treasury Stanton came to New York to arrange for a $50,000,000 gold loan. The leading bankers were invited to meet him in the director's room of the American Exchange Bank, where negotiations were completed.

On June 30, 1865, the bank entered the national system, changing its title from The American Exchange Bank to The American Exchange National Bank.

The bank's business had increased to such an extent that in 1901 it was necessary to have larger quarters and the present building was erected.

When the Federal reserve system became operative, The American Exchange National Bank became a member bank.

The American Exchange National Bank has followed a consistent course. Its management has been maintained along conservative lines. It has always had the confidence of its customers and the public. Its growth is that of a single institution.
